Curiosity

At Claremont Prep, we value a child's natural curiosity and capacity for intellectual discovery. Our hands-on approach to learning is enhanced by our brand new physical plant, a fully wireless environment boasting 117,000 square feet of classrooms, art studios, laboratories, outdoor play spaces, a library, cafeteria, regulation gym and swimming pool.

Located in the heart of Lower Manhattan, financial capital of the world and New York's fastest growing residential neighborhood, Claremont Preparatory School offers a superior educational program to 1000 children ages 5 through 14 in a state-of-the-art facility. We are committed to providing our students with a strong foundation in academics, the arts and athletics and to preparing them to meet the challenges of high school, college and the global community.

Enrollment for September 2005 begins Tuesday, September 7, 2004.

Piping Plovers Nesting In A Sandtrap At Shinnecock Cause Problems

By Dan Rattiner

Last Thursday, just nine days before the start of the US Open golf tournament in Shinnecock, a family of endangered piping plovers were found nesting in a sand trap just in front of the green on the third hole. Piping plover nests are frequently found in the dunes along the ocean, and when they are, the environmentalists rope off these nesting areas, and post big signs and the equivalent of crime tape. Trespassing inside disturbs these beautiful, protected little birds. Stiff fines, even jail sentences, can be handed down to those that do.

Officials of the golf tournament were notified that afternoon by the Dunehampton Environmental Group, which sent a fax to Shinnecock saying that during a routine helicopter inspection along the beach, this nest, with two adults and five eggs, had been found in the sandtrap. The fax advised them of the consequences of the finding, and said the DEG would be coming by. Apparently, believing the environmental organization would remove the nest and birds, the golf committee welcomed their Range Rover at 4 p.m. But they were astonished to see them putting up the signs and the tape around the sandtrap. Told to remove these obstructions, the environmentalists offered instead to call the police. The police did come, and explained to Shinnecock Officials that no matter where the piping plovers nest, the area has to be roped off for at least six weeks after the chicks hatch, which is usually at the end of June. Both the environmentalists and the police then left.

Nothing like this had ever happened before in the 112-year history of the US Open.

An emergency meeting of golf officials was held on Friday morning at the club. The third green, a picturesque sight usually, was clearly visible outside the clubhouse living room, with the sandtrap all

Correction

In an article published on June 4, it was reported that Annette Hinkle, Features Editor at the Sag Harbor Express, called her ex-husband George Speckenbach, for help in the quest to save the sign that was taken down from the Sag Harbor Movie Theater. In fact it was Judy Clempner, who was with Annette at the time, who called her ex-husband George. Annette and George have never been married, to each other. Judy and George were married. We stand corrected.

taped up and the signage still in place. There were no birds about, but the nest with the eggs in it could be seen through a telescope, which the club had set up by the fireplace for the golf officials.

Discussions about what to do went on for the better part of two hours. Nothing like this had ever happened before in the 112-year history of the US Open.

A proposal was made to cancel the Open, or at least postpone it until the piping plovers had hatched and gone, but nobody thought this was a good idea. That would have pushed the Open back to July. NBC wouldn't put up with it.

They then discussed what to do in the event that somebody hit a shot into this bunker. Normally, an unplayable lie would cost the golfer stroke and distance, but then in another part of the rule book there is a section about man-made obstructions and how to deal with them. The golfer gets a free lift, dropping the ball over his shoulder somewhere away from the obstruction.

There was some debate about which of these two parts of the rulebook applied in this case, one side arguing that the golfers had presumably been warned about these federal laws, which superseded the golf laws, this was not a man-made situation, and so therefore it was a stroke and distance, while the other said, interpreting the same information, you could declare this this could bring a free drop.

A vote was taken. By a margin of 7 to 6, it was decided the penalty would be a free drop.

The group then moved on to a discussion about how to get the golf ball out from inside the roped off area, since entering it was illegal.

"If you can't go in, there might be so many golf balls in there during the week that the plovers will not be able to maneuver around properly, and that could be a violation for which this body could be responsible," an attorney said.

There was further discussion about whether a ball might injure or actually kill a piping plover were it to land on him (or her) and what the ramifications of that might be.

"With all the crowds there and all the media and everything," the chairman said, "the plovers might decide to leave on their own."

Someone said that he had talked to the environmentalists and that would never happen. Piping plovers, tiny as they are, stand their ground when their nests are threatened.

An older member said that once, fifty five years ago in Georgia, a crocodile wandered onto the fifth fairway of the Savannah Links golf course.

"It was during the second round," he said. "Snead was up by two. Raining as I remember."

"What happened?" somebody asked.

"They shot him," the older member said.

It was finally decided, by a vote of 11 to 2, that a member of the Dunehampton Environmental Group should be asked to station himself next to the sandtrap while the game was in play, and that he should be asked to make it his responsibility to fetch any errant golf balls, using whatever slow-motion fluid movements he felt necessary to do so, and using whatever poles with nets or what-

Y'ER OUT!

Seinfeld's Baseball Diamond Strikes Out As An "Accessory Structure"

By Dan Rattiner

Jerry Seinfeld, you may have heard, has built a regulation-sized baseball field on his ocean-front estate in East Hampton. He has room to do this. The property is nearly eleven acres.

This Major League baseball field is on the front lawn between the house and road, rather than on the back lawn between the house and the ocean. Paparazzi have already been photographing this baseball field from the air, which is just now nearing completion. You can see the bases. Even the rubber on the mound. There is all sorts of speculation about who he might invite to play there. He will need 17 friends to do it right.

Seinfeld really likes baseball, which is well known. He is often seen at Yankee games. Here in East Hampton, everything is just so. The white lines. The batter's box. The grass with the square-mowed patterns, the hard red clay of the infield. The left field "wall," if there was one, is out there about 400 feet. Centerfield is a bit closer. But right field is about 370 feet.

There is all sorts of speculation about who he might invite to play there.

But there are problems. Seinfeld has built this ball field without a permit. Who would have guessed he would have needed a permit? You have to have a permit to do just about anything in the Hamptons now.

In 1991, the Town of East Hampton passed Chapter 220, Part 1, Paragraph 04 which declares that you need a permit for any "active recreation" involving substantial improvement to the land "as for playing fields, tennis courts, swimming pools and the like."

In 2002, after some people in a residential neighborhood of Springs complained about this huge daily volleyball game being played with hundreds of spectators cheering, and after a wily lawyer challenged the wording about his client's tennis court, the town amended the law with Chapter 255, Part 1, 20 which adds the term "playing courts" to the definition (thus allowing them to regulate the locations of volleyball courts, tennis courts and, I suppose, even croquet courts).

"Playing these games without 'improving the land' as the law is written would be just fine," one member of the Town Building Department explained. So just sticking croquet wickets and posts in the ground would be fine. Not, however, a regulation major league baseball field.

And there is a further problem. The permits given for the creation of one of these "playing fields" come under a section of the law that deals with what are known as "accessory structures." Things such as sheds, swimming pools, garages and Major League regulation baseball fields are under the umbrella of "accessory structures."

But accessory to what? In order for a permit to be issued, such a playing field has to be an accessory to a main residence. And in this particular case, the Seinfeld estate is divided into two separate parcels. The major parcel, which is nearest to the ocean, has the main house, the 22-car garage, the swimming pool, the pool house, the beach house and so forth and so on. The other parcel, which is near to the road, up until now, has not had anything on it. It was a vacant lot when it was purchased long ago. And so when Seinfeld purchased this estate from Billy Joel for $34 million five years ago, he actually bought two separate pieces. And only one of these pieces, the piece with the "main house" on it, qualifies for an application for accessory structures. Unfortunately, Seinfeld has caused the official regulation Major League baseball field to be constructed on the parcel where it is illegal.

At this point, Seinfeld, who should have whatever the hell he ever wants on his property as far as I am concerned for all the joy that he has brought to people, has two choices.

One is that he can sell the vacant parcel to himself and join them together to make one single parcel. I am not sure of the ramifications of this. But I do know that if he tries to make this sale, which might involved $5 million for the vacant land to be transferred on paper from himself to himself, he will encounter the town real estate tax, which will require him to pony up 2% of the sale price to complete it. That would be $100,000 to the town for land he already owns.

The second thing he can do is send a bulldozer in to flatten this officially sanctioned regulation major league baseball field, and rebuild it on the other parcel, to go along with all the other accessory structures that are already on the site. That somebody might hit a ball over the centerfielder into the ocean to bop a surfer on the head might be a consideration if there is not enough room there for that, but that's just too bad. He should have bought 15 acres.

Or else what he might do is just pay the fine, which I think for a zoning violation is $50. He could pay it. And that would be that. I think. But maybe I'm wrong about all of this.

You deserve a vacation from sleepless nights!

How The Hamptons Prepared For A Nazi Invasion That Never Came

By Dan Rattiner

Beginning in 1939, the United States began to arm itself for what was developing into the biggest armed conflict in the history of mankind. The Japanese had invaded China and Korea. And halfway around the world the Germans had invaded Poland and Czechoslovakia. Both countries had declared themselves to be interested in world conquest.

Few people imagined what might happen if they succeeded on their opposite sides of the globe and were to link up, but it was widely believed that if they ever did, there would be a showdown between them. Germans were told they were the master race, entitled to dominate all others. The Japanese were of the belief that their Emperor was the son of God. On the other hand, the diplomats from these two countries negotiated a peace pact called the Axis. If one were attacked, it would be considered an attack on the other.

Many people here in America believed that the United States, flanked by its oceans, was safe from entry into this conflict. But as time wore on in 1940 and 1941, the number of Americans holding that belief dwindled. The belief completely vanished when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. And after the Americans declared war, the Germans, honoring their obligations to the Japanese, declared war on America.

Part concrete clapboard, part wood clapboard

The invasion of France, celebrated this past week, marked the beginning of the end of both the Germans and the Axis. But that did not take place until June 6, 1944. And between the start of the war and the huge invasion at Normandy, many fortifications were built here in America, along both the east and west coasts, in the belief that either the Japanese or the Germans might mount an invasion of their own to try to take over America.

A particularly sensitive place, Washington officials decided, was the eastern end of Long Island. And as a result, civilians with oceanfront homes were recruited during those years to serve as lookouts for enemy ships, and people on horseback — this was a farming and fishing area then — were recruited to go on patrol up and down the beaches. Soldiers, sailors and coast guardsmen were also placed on the beaches to keep a lookout. Should a German armada appear, the alarm would be sounded and soldiers rushed to defend. For that purpose, many concrete bunkers, machine gun nests and anti-aircraft gun emplacements were built on the beaches, particularly in Montauk, but also as far west as Quogue. Many of these abandoned facilities, still exist and may be toured by the general public. At least one of them, the largest of all, is still active today, but with an entirely different role. And that is Gabreski Airport in Westhampton, formerly the Westhampton Air Force Base.

If you wanted to tour these facilities and you started in the east at the Lighthouse in Montauk, here is what you would see.

At the lighthouse itself, still standing and almost as tall as the lighthouse, is a six-story concrete lookout tower and former gun emplacement, painted white. Placed right in front of the lighthouse, between this ancient (1786) structure and the cliffs, this tower can clearly be seen in all photographs, post cards and oil paintings made of the facility. Note the slit window, high up, near the top. Think of that from the military perspective.

Slightly to the southwest of the Lighthouse are the remains of a machine gun pillbox that was notched into the cliff face there. The cliff has washed away, and from about 1950 to 1980 the pillbox was almost entirely visible. Then it, too, fell into the sea.

Just to the west of that, an entire complex of military fortifications and buildings have been refurbished and opened to the public under the aegis of the New York State Park Commission. They are accessible from a turn off on the south side of Route 27 as it begins to loop around when it reaches the Lighthouse.

Grab a map of the park as you enter. Here you will find four huge concrete gun emplacements that once each held massive shore batteries the size of the giant guns aboard the decks of such ships as the Battleship Missouri. There is an anti-aircraft gun emplacement, some abandoned barracks buildings, mess halls and rec halls. Also a PX. The place was named after a Naval officer, Major General Andrew Hero Jr., who served during the 1930s. About 4,000 soldiers were living in this complex during the war. And though many of the buildings were torn down after the war ended, there are pictures of it that show what looks like a peaceful "fishing" village. On top of the military rec hall, which does stand, you see a cupola designed to fool the pilots of enemy planes flying overhead into thinking that this was a schoolhouse.

Beginning in Camp Hero, and located every three or four miles along the beach through Montauk, Napeague, East Hampton and Southampton and Quogue, the Army built two and a half story tall, fake private homes. The ocean-facing half of these structures was con-

Welcome

After 6 Years Of Construction, Rennert Moves Into His Sagaponack Home

By Dan Rattiner

On a hot summer night in August, six years ago, some attorneys representing Ira Rennert appeared at a meeting in Southampton Town Hall to explain to an angry crowd that Mr. Rennert only wanted to build a home for himself and his family, just like everybody else would like to do. Rennert had applied for a permit for his home. The building inspector put his stamp of approval on it. It didn't matter to him that the house might be a little larger than expected. There were no laws in place saying you couldn't build a big house.

The plans were unrolled in the meeting room of Town Hall, a three story building that had originally been built as the high school. Rennert's home would be twice the size of Town Hall. It would be the biggest house ever built in the Town. And, very likely, in the nation.

To be constructed on what was at that time a 62-acre oceanfront potato field, Rennert's house would consist of at least half a dozen structures. These would include a beach house, a recreation building, a guest house, two gate houses, a 20 car garage, an indoor

ONE KING KULLEN, TWO KING KULLEN

By Dan Rattiner

As I am sure you know, this newspaper keeps track of all that is going on here on the East End, which often includes some of the driest public meetings imaginable. Things are presented on 2.74 acres that have 11 parking spaces and 20 foot setbacks. The buildings comprise 22,000 square feet. There should be an elevator for the disabled, but they've gotten around that because it is on a hill and there's an entrance around back on the second floor. Stuff like that.

"22,000 square feet?" someone will say.

"About a third the size of King Kullen," will come the reply.

The King Kullen referred to is the one in Bridgehampton, which is one of the flagship stores of that chain. It was opened with great fanfare some years ago, with numerous members of the Kullen family in attendance, and with its various recycling departments and photo departments and deli departments it is one of the most modern supermarkets imaginable. It's also, at 60,000 square feet, very large.

"I love King Kullen," someone told me the other day. "But it took me a while to get used to it. It's like its own State. Montana, maybe."

Anyway, after a decade, in addition to being the largest and best known supermarket in the Hamptons, it has also become a frame of reference. And a measurement.

A town is discussing plans for a new golf course clubhouse. "It's about eight tenths the size of King Kullen."

A proposal for a Barnes and Noble shopping center in Bridgehampton was revised downward from 50,000 square feet to 20,000 square feet. It's now four tenths of a King Kullen.

When people discuss the Rennert mansion in Sagaponack, 110,000 square feet and the construction continuing after six years, people say "it's two King Kullens."

So there you have it. We have acres, cubic feet, gallons, miles, kilograms and King Kullens.

We also have the phrase — we've had it for a long time — "South of the Highway." So Rennert is building a two-King Kullen dream house, South of the Highway in Sagaponack. (Algonquin for "place where the ground nuts grow.") You all know what I'm talking about if I say that, right? We keep this up, and pretty soon outsiders won't have a clue.

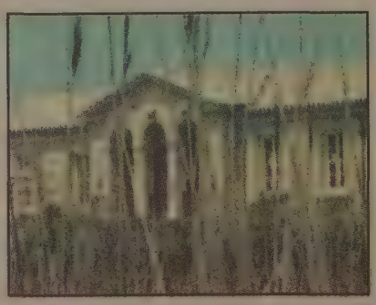
swimming pool, a tennis court, an outdoor parking area for about 110 cars and a main house. The main house would have 29 bedrooms, a dining room that could seat 100, two bowling alleys, a movie screening room, two walk-in cold boxes in the kitchen, 100 telephone lines in case his wife and kids wanted to talk to more than one person at the same time, various courtyards, libraries, living rooms, family rooms and so forth and so on. There would be 23 baths, a squash court, a handball court, a few hundred TV hookups and a few other amenities.



Try as people might at this meeting, nobody could ever get around the fact that there was no law saying a man could not build a home this large. There were laws that said poor people could not build homes less than 800 square feet. There were no laws about rich people. The sky was the limit.

Paul Houlihan, the Town Building Inspector at the time, said at this meeting that since his ruling was being challenged by all the neighbors, he had gone to the dictionary to look up the word "family."

Only a family could be living in this house.

"A family is defined as those people who are related by blood in a single generation, plus their children," he said. Checking out the Rennerts, he found this would include Mr. and Mrs. Rennert and their immediate brothers and sisters, their children and their wives and their children. By his count, this came to 23 people. With guests they would surely need 29 bedrooms.

The project went ahead.

And this year, finally, it has been completed. Later this month, members of the Rennert family will be in residence at this home for the first time. And, surely, there will be good times had by all. Six years have passed since the building permit was issued. This has been the longest construction project in East End history. And surely, at an estimated $100 million, the most expensive.

Also, during these six years, everyone has gotten quite a bit older. And the world has made quite a few turns.

Ira Rennert himself was 63 back then. He is 69 today. The big news then was the sexual affair that President Bill Clinton was having with one of his interns. The big news now is that we are at war with Muslim terrorists. The biggest buildings east of the Mississippi at that time were the Twin Towers in New York. Today, they are a hole in the ground, smashed by the terrorists, with money just now being allocated to build their replacements, to be known as the Freedom Tower.

Shortly after Rennert got all his approvals and began to build, bulldozers came in and stripped the farmland of what was believed to be the finest and richest topsoil on the East coast — Bridgehampton Loam. Today, with the mansion and its accessory buildings totaling 110,000 square feet, there are new trees, bushes and lawns on the property that almost totally screen the house from everything around it. This landscaping is also very out of character with the farmland around it.

In the early days of the construction, this vast construction site stood out like a sore thumb in the vast expanse of potato fields that extended along the beach in both direction for several miles. Today, with its trees and shrubs, the Rennert property looks more like a forest —the trees were brought in fully grown — and nestled in the middle a great castle designed in the Romanesque style, its vast scale not nearly as oppressive as it was during the construction process.

Rennert was almost totally unknown when he started this project. Now, he is very well known. At least his reputation is very well known and much of it is not good. He made his first fortune manipulating a junk bond offering with the now discredited financier Michael Milken in the 1980s, according to Forbes Magazine. Since that time, his series of interlocking corporations, overseen by one holding company, have gobbled up one distressed mining and metal manufacturing

Steinbeck Revealed

Statue Of John Steinbeck Is Unveiled At Ceremony In Sag Harbor

By Matt Stevenson

Of June in Old Baytown, the fictional setting of The Winter of Our Discontent based largely upon Sag Harbor, John Steinbeck once wrote, "This is my time, and all is right with the world." When the famous playwright Edward Albee read these lines before a hushed crowd in the Bay Street Theater this past Friday evening, the pronouncement quite suited the balmy evening.

Beginning at 8 p.m., the Sag Harbor Lions' Club and the John Steinbeck Memorial Trust hosted a unique event to celebrate the unveiling of a newly sculpted bust of the great author. Proceeds from the evening's $25 door fees and silent book auction went toward the creation of a John Steinbeck Study Center and Archive in the village's John Jermain Memorial Library, where the bust is to be housed.

To this reporter's untrained eye, however, the evening at the Bay Street Theater had more in common with a séance than it did with a conventional fundraiser. By the end, the crowd was not so much admiring a skillful rendering of Steinbeck's image as striving to channel the spirit of the great man that lay behind it; to make it alive for themselves right there in the present.

The events of the evening were structured with the skill and purpose of a well-planned novel. After complimentary hors' d'oeurve supplied by local eateries were served in the lobby, some one hundred fifty attendees, of whom most were chatting cordially, funneled into the cozy theater. The commanding voices of MCs Joe Ricker and Ernest Schade opened the evening on a humorous note, as Ricker joked about having taken "the last of [Steinbeck's] virginity" when he recorded his voice on a radio interview, and then losing it again himself by misplacing the tape.

What lay beneath was a stately bronze likeness of a weathered-looking Steinbeck...

Schade then introduced Mariann Megna and Nancy Remkus, two Sag Harbor musicians who performed three songs from their recent album Still with accompaniment from a band of "friends." Megna and Remkus were specially selected to perform by Vincent Clemente, one of the most important organizers of the event, because their music captures "the flavor of Sag Harbor" in the same way that Steinbeck's writing did. Megna and Remkus would later close the evening by performing their musical adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Bright Is the Ring of Words," a favorite poem of Steinbeck's.

After speeches by local sculptor Dan Rizzi and art educator Peter Solow, Steinbeck's beloved sister-in-law and Honorary Committee Chair Jean Boone came onto the stage that bears the name of her sister, Elaine, for the unveiling of the bust. After pausing to speak a few gracious words to the community which has embraced her since she first came to Sag Harbor (where she currently resides), and a few characteristically frank and charming ones on the subject of the "truly lousy" Steinbeck bust in his hometown of Salinas, California, Boone removed the black cloth from the sculpture amid a flurry of flashbulbs.

What lay beneath was a stately bronze likeness of a weathered-looking Steinbeck: the aging but lively man that Sag Harbor came to know as he lived out his last fifteen years here. The next speaker appropriately was Kimberly Monson, the sculptress of the handsome work. Standing next to the craggy face of Steinbeck, the youthful Monson looked even younger than she is, but she spoke with the poise and charm of a tested professional, thanking family, advisors, and many of the members of the Steinbeck Committee individually. Of her work itself she did not speak of the sculpting (an arduous, six-month process which Monson explained to me later, and which would take an entire article to illustrate as clearly as she articulated it); she instead spoke of the countless stories of Steinbeck that she solicited from Sag Harborites, stories which she tried to sculpt onto the face of the bust.

As if taking a cue from Monson's speech, the event shifted gears; from that point on, the evening was devoted largely evoking Steinbeck's memory through storytelling. According to Vincent Clemente, the Steinbeck Committee member who masterminded the celebration, such was ultimately the goal of the Steinbeck Committee: to "tell the untold story of Steinbeck's years in Sag Harbor."

Joe Ricker came onstage again to announce the showing of Joyous Garde, a short film by Sag Harbor filmmaker John Browngardt. Named for the Sag Harbor writing room that Steinbeck in turn had named for Lancelot's castle of Arthurian legend, the film narrates stories about Steinbeck's life and times in Sag Harbor by means of interviews with local people. The author's family and friends in Sag Harbor relayed impressions about their quiet, unassuming neighbor, as well as several often-humorous anecdotes about him. A personal favorite was his son John IV's story about his father's key role in founding and orchestrating the inaugural Old Whalers' Festival in the early 60s, predecessor of the modern Harborfest.

"My dad talked it over with his friends and decided that the thing the Whalers' Festival really needed was a whale. So they built this ridiculous wooden whale, fitted it over the top of one of the old whaling boats, and brought out a water-spout from the fire department so the whale would have a spout. Well, the thing turned over and started to sink after about an hour in the water, but it was four o'clock by then and they'd all had so much beer that they wouldn't be of much use in a water rescue. So they had to wait for the current to carry it back in."

I picked up a few more stories from Ms. Boone at the intermission that followed the screening. "There wasn't nothing fancy about him," she remarked in her Southern drawl. "That was what really attracted him about Sag Harbor. He was rich and famous by the time he came here, but you know he only owned three suits. He used to call one Berry and Black, one Dorian Gray, and the other Old Blue." I was beginning to become aware of Steinbeck not as a great author, but as a unique and vibrant spirit whose life helped to create the Sag Harbor I've come to know.

As the second half of the night progressed with readings by authors and Steinbeck friends Roger Rosenblatt, Edward Albee, and Joe Pintauro, I realized that this in large part was Steinbeck's legacy: this readiness to tell the stories of the past. If Steinbeck's years in Sag Harbor gave anything to the community, they gave the gift of narrative of which each of these three special guests partook. These three great authors, like Steinbeck, used their words to craft the events of the past into something with order, significance, and enduring power.

At the end of the evening I made sure to talk to Vincent Clemente, the man who had put so much time and energy into the event. He told me that he'd discovered Steinbeck during his early years in the Army, when someone gave him a copy of Sea of Cortez. "In that book he wrote 'Either nothing matters, or everything matters,' and I believe that by the end of his life, while he was in Sag Harbor, he decided that everything mattered." I found myself thinking about what it must have been like for him to be a young man stationed in Korea, or Japan, or Germany, reading Steinbeck, and about all the years that had come between then and now. I imagined that for him as for everyone there that night, as for Sag Harbor itself, John Steinbeck's gift of narrative had somehow helped all of those years to matter.

It's Open

Come To Shinnecock To Shop, Stroll, Dine And Ogle At The Golfers

By Bonnie Cox

The 2004 US Open is being played at Shinnecock Hills Golf Club June 17 to 20. It would be hard to miss the coming attractions — the special traffic signs up on the Long Island Expressway and local roadways, and all the news coverage. Everyone is talking about it. Those with tickets are planning their strategy for seeing the most players or the most of a favorite player. Others are renting their homes and heading out of town.

The US Open Championship is one of the four major tournaments on the Professional Golfers Association tour. It is the crown jewel of the United States Golf Association. Every professional golfer wants to qualify for it and win it. Prestigious private and public courses vie for the opportunity to host it. Following is some pertinent information about next week's extravaganza in Southampton.

The Course

Golf Magazine rates Shinnecock Hills at fourth in its Top 100 Courses in the World. In the U.S., only Pine Valley and Cypress Point rank above Shinnecock Hills, but they are very private and seemingly have no interest in ever hosting an open. Muirfield in North Berwick, Scotland, a British Open venue, is ranked third in the world and first among the courses where the US Open is played. Shinnecock Hills is ranked first among U.S. courses that host the U.S. Open.

The course at Shinnecock Hills is one of the toughest in the world, presenting challenge after challenge to the players. In the 1995 U.S. Open at Shinnecock, no one finished under par, and in 1986, only Raymond Floyd was under par at the end of the tournament. What makes the course so difficult? It's a combination of the narrow fairways, deep rough, and the wicked wind. At 6,996 yards and par 70, the course is short by today's standards. By contrast, The Masters at Augusta is now 7,290 yards, and this year's British Open at Royal Troon will play 7,175 yards. The PGA Championship at Whistling

Getting There

Readers were calling Dan's Papers during the past month to say that those arriving to Shinnecock from the West to see the U. S. Open, have lots of options. But those coming from the east do not. From the west, you can take a Long Island Rail Road train directly to the site, where a special stop has been set up across the street from Southampton College. Or, you can drive to the Westhampton Airport, park your car in the parking lot there and take a shuttle bus the final 16 miles to Shinnecock. Buses leave every twenty minutes or so. But what are people to do who live out east of Shinnecock?

I called the railroad, and the executive office transferred me to the ticket office which transferred me to the press office. There a spokesperson told me he had no idea how we would get

Straits will be 7,600 yards.

There is a mystique to Shinnecock. Ben Crenshaw says, "Imagine The Masters, US Open and British Open all rolled into one, and you have some idea of the atmosphere at Shinnecock."

Wind has always been a factor at Shinnecock. It can come from a different direction each day and comes from different directions during the day as the player proceeds on his round. The wind will be even more of a factor this year. Mike Michaud, Shinnecock Superintendent since 2000, and Tim Moraghan, USGA Championship Agronomist, have worked together to fine tune the course to championship condition. Michaud has removed all non-indigenous trees, cleaned out undergrowth, and reseeded with native grasses. Flags that previously barely moved because the wind was blocked are now really flapping. Moraghan calls it a "whole new ball game" with the wind, after the changes on holes seven, eight, twelve and fourteen.

Then think about the rough. Six inches of tough rye grass and blue grass. The rough is so treacherous that during the 1986 Open Jack Nicklaus lost a ball. This had never happened to Nicklaus in his entire career. Then there's all that waist-high fescue beyond the rough. In 1995, Tiger Woods, playing as an amateur, was in the long grass on the 3rd hole and hurt his wrist trying to hit back to the fairway. He eventually had to withdraw from the tournament.

What does it take to win at Shinnecock? Accurate tee shots. Good iron shots. The ability to get out of the rough. Keeping a smooth tempo on the fast greens.

Security

What a shock to drive past Shinnecock Hills the other day and see the golf course surrounded by a six-foot chain link fence and an array of TV trucks and corporate tents. By now the fence should be topped with the planned razor wire. At any given time during the event, 200 officers from various law enforcement agencies will be on duty, according to Southampton Town Police Captain Anthony Tenaglia.

There will be increased security on land, on sea and in the air. In the air, Federal officials have instituted a no fly zone. Meanwhile, on sea, the Coast Guard and armed Bay Constables will be patrolling Peconic Bay, Shinnecock Bay and the Shinnecock Canal. The biggest security presence is on land with

Who's Here

Sting

Singer

By Christian McLean

Did you hear the one about the ditch digger, the English teacher, and the soccer coach whowalked into a bar and started playing music? It was 1996, the bar was Stephen Talkhouse and all three, the digger, the teacher, and the coach were the same dynamic individual, Sting. You may remember the monumental evening when Sting, a frequent visitor to the Hamptons who often rents in here in the summertime, performed a collection of his finest songs for VH1's "Storytellers" series, providing his enthralled audience a window into the mind and soul of one of the world's most successful musicians during the intimate session at Amagansett's renowned watering hole.

In the beginning, there was Gordon Mathew Sumner, a young boy who grew up in Wallsend, Newcastle Upon Tyne, England. His passion for music developed quite early and, while still an unknown, he found himself playing cruise ships and backing strippers in cabarets. It was not exactly the musical career the young bass guitarist had dreamed of.

Like the Beatles, Sting drew inspiration from as many musical influences as possible, including reggae, Indian, blues, rock, and his favorite jazz. While still finding his niche, Sting played in a Dixieland jazz group and a fusion-jazz quartet called Last Exit. It was at this time in his life that Gordon became "Sting." The name, which seems almost menacing, actually stems from a simple black and yellow hornet-striped shirt which Gordon was known to wear.

Sting joined drummer Steward Copeland and initially guitarist Henri Padovani to form the Police in 1977. Padovani was eventually replaced by Andy Summers and the Police released their first single, "Roxanne," in 1978. Although not an overwhelming success in the States, the song, written by Sting, about a prostitute, broke the top forty and sparked a stunning six year run for the Police as one of the premier bands worldwide.

1978 also began Sting's acting career when he appeared in two films. They were both small roles, first in Radio On and the second, beating out Sex Pistol's Johnny Rotten for the part of Ace in the film version of The Who's Quadrophenia. His ability to sing may have helped land the latter role, but his notoriety as a performer had little to do with it. "I made two movies before anyone knew I was a singer," Sting said.

The name, which seems almost menacing, actually stems from a simple black and yellow hornet-striped shirt...

The bleach blonde trio (whose hair had been dyed that color for a chewing gum ad prior to signing their record deal) continued producing globally chart topping hits with playful tunes like "De Do Do Do, De Da Da Da" and more serious ones such as "Don't Stand So Close To Me," which is rumored to be based on an incident during Sting's days as a schoolteacher. This run at the top also included "Every Little Thing She Does Is Magic," "King of Pain," and "Every Breath You Take," officially the most requested song of all time.

In the early 1980s, with the success of the Police's six albums, which either turned gold, platinum, or multi-platinum, including 1983's Synchronicity at quadruple platinum, Sting had become one of the hottest commodities in the entertainment industry. He was receiving film scripts (practically one a week) and was even offered the role as the villain in For Your Eyes Only, but due to touring conflicts had to turn the role down. His film break came as the lead character in Brimstone & Treacle in 1982. The next year, David Lynch cast him in the Sci-Fi classic, Dune, where he played the evil Feyd-Rautha. Later in 1983, Sting was approached for the role of Pontius Pilate in Martin Scorsese's The Last Temptation of Christ, but the part was given to another blonde haired singer, David Bowie.

In 1984 many things changed. His first marriage with Frances Tomelty ended, the Police went their separate ways and the acting roles slowed down. It would have been easy to have walked away from the entertainment industry with his place firmly secured in the annals of history, but he didn't. Sting instead embarked on a solo career which has spanned the past twenty years.

Following the break-up of the Police, Sting launched his first solo album, Dreams of the Blue Turtles, which featured jazz luminaries Branford Marsalis, Kenny Kirkland, and Omar Hakim. The album reached No. 2 on the charts where it stayed for six weeks. It was evident that even without Copeland and Summers, Sting was still gold.

By this time Sting had turned his attention both musically and personally toward international issues. Beginning with Live Aid in 1985, the thirty-four-year-old singer embarked on a series of humanitarian endeavors that continue through the present day. His faith in Amnesty International is dogmatic. "I don't belong to a church or political party or a group of any kind. I feel that Amnesty International is the most civilized organization in history...I believe in its non-violence. I believe in its effectiveness, its dignity and its sense of commitment."

crete, with a slit window on the second floor just under the eaves of the roof, for machine guns. The inland-facing half of the structures, however, was just wood clapboard. This clapboard, together with the wood peaked roof, did nothing except complete what would appear to someone far away to be simply a private summer home on the beach. On the concrete side, the forms into which the concrete was poured were made with overlapping wood boards to make the hardened concrete look like wooden clapboard. It was very effective.

Most of these "houses" are today real houses, or parts of real houses. The Army, in deciding where to put them, had simply chosen vacant oceanfront land. They contacted the owners of the properties, told them what they intended to do "for the war effort" and succeeded in persuading all the land owners to simply let them build whatever this was, and then return it to them with this "improvement" on it when the war ended. The property owners then made them into private homes and some of them are still in the hands of the original owners today.

All of these fortifications — one of them with the wood roof and rear wall is still on the highest point in Camp Hero — are still standing. How can you remove them? The concrete walls are four feet thick. But in recent years, nearly all of them have been imaginatively done up or expanded upon. There is one in Napeague on Whaler's Lane east of Beach Hampton that was renovated a few years ago and which you can clearly see from the road, and, even more clearly, from the beach.

Can You Hear Me Now?

Wireless Phone Antennas Placed Inside Steeples, Cupolas, Flag Poles

By Anthony Vela

It is hard not to pass a pedestrian or a car these days without seeing someone talking on a mobile phone.

The mobile phone has become a necessity for those who can afford the monthly bill. Some mobile phone calling plans are so good that people are replacing their home phones with mobile phones. However, the more mobile phones that are in use, the more cell towers are needed to service this ever growing industry. Have you ever tried to use your mobile phone only to see the message "no service" or "out-of-service area ?" Well, if you have, it is because you are in an area that does not have enough cell towers to provide service.

According to town officials, the cellular communication company Omnipoint has a plan to erect as many as 82 new antennas throughout East Hampton. If the plan goes through, town residents can expect other companies to file their own plans with the town.

With a cell tower on school property, the Springs school would charge a monthly fee in the range of $2,000 to $3,000...

Although East Hampton cannot outright reject all antennas and towers within the town, a new wireless master plan forces companies to follow town regulations. Before 2002, East Hampton had no idea how many cell towers and antennas were in service so they hired Ted Kreines, a California consultant, who found well over 100 private sites. With no tracking system in place, the town lost thousands of dollars. The town quickly passed a cell tower moratorium so the consultant could draft a wireless master plan that is now in effect today. The plan creates regulations for all telecommunications antennas and tower projects within the Town, and sets forth planning and zoning regulations pursuant of cell towers and antennas. It also created standards for review. With special permits, cellular sites are permitted in all zoning

All of these facilities, with their men and guns at the ready, completely failed to notice the one single time that armed German soldiers splashed through the surf and came ashore here. It's been said that never, during the entire war, was a shot fired from these facilities, but clearly they should have been.

On June 22, 1942, two years before the invasion of Normandy, on a dark, foggy night, four German spies, trained at a spy school in Bavaria, and fully armed, opened the hatch of a Nazi submarine 100 yards off what is now Atlantic Avenue Beach in Amagansett, inflated a rubber raft, climbed in it with some sailors from the sub, and got themselves rowed through the surf to the beach.

Wooden boxes and duffel bags were tossed from the rubber boat onto the sand, and the men, in full Nazi uniform (!!) hopped out of the boat and dragged them up to the back of the beach. There, they dug holes, buried explosives and weapons and then changed clothes from their uniforms —which they buried — to "fishermen's" clothes and boots.

The Germans then walked to the Amagansett Railroad Station laden with cash, maps, more weapons and fishing gear, bought tickets for the train trip to Manhattan and boarded it when it came just after dawn. They were only arrested four days later when the leader of the group, having missed various spy connections, simply turned the others in.

The only three other major military installations on Long Island that I know of from World War II were at Fort Pond Bay in Montauk, in Riverhead and Elmont, Long Island further to the west, where a man named Leroy Grumman, working in his garage, designed and built a prototype fighter plane that came to the attention of the Navy, who was desperate to find something that could shoot down Japanese Zeros. The design, for an aircraft called the F3F Wildcat, was fabulous. Money was made available and Grumman built a factory where workmen turned them out as fast as they could. By the next year Grumman had a better model, the F4F Hellcat, which could shoot down Zeros almost at will. These aircraft, with folding wings so they could be stored close together belowdecks aboard aircraft carriers, are largely credited for turning the tide in the Pacific. Most of them were tested on a military airfield built for Grumman off Route 25A in Riverhead — they were a common sight overhead for the farmers and fishermen who worked below — and then flown to Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn, (no longer used, but now part of the Gateway National Recreation Area) to be put aboard the carriers and sent off.

For many years after the war, the Navy, immensely grateful for the contribution made by Grumman, bought a series of ever-improving fighter aircraft from him and his successors. These included the F9F Phantom jet that served in the Korean War, and finally the F-14, created during the Vietnam War and in service even to this day. It could attack a dozen enemy planes at one time, locating them over the horizon before they were even in sight, and shooting them down with guided missiles. In the 1970s and for the next twenty years, there was nothing like this in any military unit in the world.

Meanwhile, back in Montauk along the shores of Fort Pond Bay, the Navy built a torpedo testing station, with boats, seaplanes, barracks buildings (some of them at the Montauk Manor) and testing facilities right by the Montauk Railroad Station.

Newly manufactured torpedoes would be shipped out to Montauk aboard a train, unloaded, fitted with dummy charges, and then as a test, fired at a target floating in Fort Pond Bay, with the seaplane flying overhead to mark their progress.

This old torpedo testing station was long ago bulldozed down to make way for a bayfront resort. Also taken down were the barracks building by the Manor, and a combination administration building and infirmary. The Manor today is a hotel and condominium.

Something also needs to be said about the Westhampton Air Base, just north of the tracks on the Riverhead Road in that community. Built at the beginning of the war, it served as the central point to which all alerts could be radioed. An enemy could be sighted, and the planes at Westhampton — bombers, fighters and helicopters — could be scrambled and sent out to deal with the situation.

The soldiers lived in barracks on the base, and officers lived across the Riverhead Road in a residential area consisting of two-family private homes with front and back yards. The ever that would keep the piping plovers from becoming frightened.

"He would know how to do this," the chairman said.

"This is a FIRST," somebody said, breaking in. He was gaveled down.

Later on Friday, the chairman of the golf committee met with the chief representative of the golfers to tell him of the decisions and the conditions on the course. The representative said he was not happy about this. He said he thought it would seriously, perhaps fatally, affect the outcome of the Open.

"It's the third hole," the chairman said, noting that there were fifteen to follow every day that could change the outcome. "Also it's the same for everybody."

There was some discussion about how far back from the tape the free drop would extend. The representative pointed out that a ball could come to rest, say, two feet before the crime tape, and that would be too close for even a sand wedge to safely loft the ball over the tape onto the green. He suggested a four foot "free zone" on the outside of the crime tape from which a golfer could remove his ball to get further away from the tape and the chairman said he would bring this suggestion to the full committee when they met about this crisis at lunch on the following day, Saturday. He said he concurred with this.

While they spoke, the two piping plover parents, peeping wildly, fluttered down to the nest, admired the eggs and made soft cooing noises. The chairman and the representative looked through the telescope one at a time. They smiled at one another. It was a beautiful thing to see, indeed.

Early on Saturday morning, a secretary, preparing a press release stating the information about the arrival of the endangered species and how the Open had decided to deal with it, happened to look out the clubhouse living room window to notice that though the tape and the signage was still there, the small dark spot that she had been told was the nest was now gone. She looked through the telescope. It was not where it had been. And so she scanned carefully through the telescope at every inch of the sand trap and came to the conclusion that the piping plovers were indeed no longer there.

Quickly, she called the chairman and several of the other committee members who arrived by eleven and walked out to the sandtrap to confirm what she said. There were no signs of the plover, and one hour later, when the rest of the committee arrived for the scheduled meeting, they were informed of this. The meeting was then cancelled, and the committee members ate their lunch at the club — lobster salads, tuna fish sandwiches, coleslaw, fries and desserts — in silence.

Later in the day, the Dunehampton Environmental Group was notified and asked if it were possible the piping plovers had left on their own. They said it was not possible, and they would be right over. By two, a half dozen environmentalists were on the scene, along with several dozen police officers, who drove their police cars with the flashing red lights right out on the fairway. It was noted there were still footprints in the sand that had been partially raked over using the adjacent sand rake, which is for that purpose, as a courtesy by whoever hits into a sandtrap so the next person who does won't have to hit out of a footprint.

"Damned strange if you ask me," the chief said.

If anyone has information that would lead to the arrest of the perpetrators of the crime of disturbing a piping plover nest, please call CR4-81200. There is a $500,000 reward which has been offered by the US Open.

On the other hand, if you are the perpetrator reading this, you may return the piping plover family and nest to their proper place in the sandtrap in front of the third green before the start of the open next Monday and there will be no questions asked.

The Open supports the environment.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #302

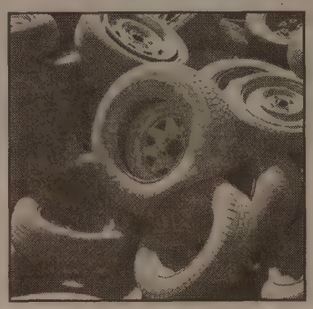
Who says I need help?

"So, you're looking at the Michelins, Ms. Flynn?"

"Yes, I thought I'd get one tire for each wheel."

"Okay....good plan. Are the tires for that van?"

"Yes, her name is Buttercup. She's been wearing those old Michelins for six years."



"Do you really want Michelin's for a 14-year-old van? Do you realize that the these tires are worth as much as the van?"

"Yes, but Buttercup likes Michelins."

"Okay, well these ones here have a 60,000 mile warranty, they're a great all season tire....."

"Can they pop clam shells?"

"Clam shells?"

"Yeah, can they pop clam shells without puncturing?"

"Why would you want to pop clam shells with your tires, Ms Flynn?"

"Because it takes too long to stomp them, you know, to fill in dips in the driveway."

"Have you ever thought of gravel?"

"No, clam shells are free. It's God's way of helping people with potholes."

"I don't think they run clam shell tests on tires, Ms. Flynn. These are excellent on wet roads and ..."

"How are they on tar?"

"Tar?"

"Tar. You know, when the road gets soft from the heat."

"Where are you driving that is so poorly paved you're riding on tar? Never mind... let me tell you , these tires are terrific on wet roads..."

"What about wet sand? Do they handle well in wet sand?"

"Well, they should handle fine in wet sand I guess, it would be good traction and all. You see, this groove design...."

"Yes, it's a lovely wheat design, I noticed it right away. It should leave a nice pattern in the tar."

"Actually, this pattern is designed to wick away up to two inches of water on the road..."

"What's the plover rating on these tires?"

"What's a plover?'

"It's a bird you must not hit."

"Look, Ms Flynn, I'm sure these tires can maneuver around plover birds, eagles, condors, whatever..."

"Don't be silly, there's no condors or eagles on eastern Long Island."

"Right. Well, I'm sure I could say that these tires have a high plover rating."

"What about yard sales? Can these tires stop really fast for yard sales?"

"Ahhhhhhhh.....YES! Yes, they can, Ms. Flynn! These tires have a Yard Sale rating of 10, that's the highest, you know. Let me just check the catalog."

"Great!

"Here it is... Plover Avoidance rating 7, Yard Sales 10, Tar 8.5, and these tires have a 40,000 clam shell popping limit."

"That's a little more than I need, but I'll take them. What's my color selection?"

"Color selection? Oh yes... the color selection... these tires come in; Road Rage Red, Pullover Pink, Giddyup Green, Yellow Lite, Blue Baby on Board and of course, Black Out Black."

"I'd like Road Rage Red."

"Fine. There's an additional $50 per tire for color, did you know that, Ms. Flynn?"

"Oh no!"

"Yes, I'm sorry."

"Ah geez... well, okay, let me have four in Black Out Black in that nice wheat tread pattern."

"You're not a married woman, are you, Ms. Flynn?"

"No, how did you know?"

"Just a wild guess. Will you please try to be married the next time you buy tires? Maybe you could bring him with you, just for fun."

"Oh.... how sweet....you are so nice to me. I'm gonna come here for everything I need from now on!"

"Very nice. We're running a brake pad special next month. Why don't you bring a swatch of a fabric you like and we'll try to match it?"

"You guys are too great....."

Sting's major humanitarian efforts, was founded in 1989 with his second wife, Trudie Styler. Initially the organization was designed to raise awareness and gain protection for the lands of the Kayapo Indians in Brazillian Amazonia. Sting and Styler's work resulted in the legal recognition of a 17,000 square mile preserve now known as the Menkragnoti Indigenous Area.

Building upon the success in Brazil, The Rainforest Foundation now supports projects throughout Latin America, Africa and Southeast Asia. Sting's constant campaigning and fundraising, including an annual benefit concert, has made great strides in promoting awareness and education about the deforestation of rainforests and its destructive effects on the indigenous peoples who live there.

In his tenure Sting has received accolades and awards from the television, film, and of course the music industry, including two Oscar Nominations for Best Song, a 2002 Golden Globe Award for "Until," two Emmys, and countless Grammy and BMI Awards including Song of the Year, Best Male Pop Vocal Performance, and Best Pop Album.

In 2003, Sting, along with the rest of the Police, was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. That same year, Sting was appointed Commander of the Order of the British Empire in the Queen's Birthday Honours List for his commitment and dedication to music.

After recording seventeen albums, fathering six children, establishing a movie career, and founding an enormous humanitarian organization, this fifty-two-year-old doesn't seem to be slowing down a bit. Voted as one of the top ten sexiest performers by VH1, Sting can still pack the house. His most recent album, Sacred Love, is a soulful and emotional collection of songs born out of the September 11th tragedies. It is his personal attempt to understand the current state of the world; trying to answer the questions the best way he knows how, through music. "My only answer to the world's problems is the old artist's solution – love."

With a professional career approaching the thirty-year milestone, Sting hasn't missed a beat. Sadly, Sting won't be pulling up a microphone at the Talkhouse this year, as he is in the midst of his Sacred Love tour, but it is still possible to see him this summer at the Jones Beach Amphitheater on July 1st and 2nd. Although his days of ditch digging and coaching are long gone, Sting's role as a teacher continues, educating each of us in life, love, and longevity.

LEARN TO SAIL

It's Easy To Learn With Professionals

We have taught hundreds of people of all ages to sail - to enjoy the thrill of the wind moving a boat through the water and to experience the quiet beauty and relaxation of sailing.

The waters of Peconic and Gardiners Bay are a special part of the East End. They should be part of your enjoyment of the area.

Our two day beginner course is taught on 23 foot keelboats. After the course you can rent a 23 foot sailboat. And you can follow the beginner course with more advanced courses.

districts but are prohibited in parks and conservation areas. There are also other "avoidance areas" that the plan lists.

However, a plan to place a cellular tower inside an 80-foot flagpole in front of the Springs School has raised the ire of East Hampton Town Board Councilwoman Debra Foster. Ms. Foster, who lives in Springs and is a former Springs School teacher, worries about a potential health hazard from radiation emitted from a cellular tower so close to a school, as well as what would happen if the tower should ever fall. Although Ms. Foster said she did not have any direct studies outlining harmful effects from cellular tower radiation, she did say that she would rather be on the side of caution. She also pointed out that the technology is so new that potential long term risks are still unknown. "My concern is the negative effect of having a cell tower at the Springs School. Having it at the school is the wrong place. Our young children are the most vulnerable, and the school is the last place it should go," says Ms. Foster.

With a cell tower on school property, the Springs school would charge a monthly fee in the range of $2,000 to $3,000, but the number could change.

Ms. Foster says that another place in Springs, Ashawagh Hall, was already chosen but all that changed when the school board decided that competitive bidding would bring in more money.

Charles Hitchcock, a Springs school board member and the Dean of Southampton College, confirms that a cellular company has approached the school board about putting an antenna inside a flagpole on school grounds. "No decision has been made," says Mr. Hitchcock about the proposal. "We have one on [Southampton] campus and we've found nothing harmful," adds Hitchcock.

According to Ms. Foster, many parents of the over 500 students that go to the Springs School were never informed about the proposal to have a cellular tower on school grounds. However, Mr. Hitchcock says that a public meeting was already held and that others may be held in the future.

You would think that the wireless master plan passed in 2002 would address cellular towers on school grounds, but Ms. Foster says that schools and town government are exempt from the regulations outlined in the wireless master plan.

"That was not my understanding when I put the plan together," says Mr. Kreines. Although he did not say that anyone should be exempt, he understood if police and other emergency service workers were.

Concerns over cell towers are not just limited to Springs, but exist in Montauk, too.

The first assistant chief of the Montauk Fire Department, Charlie Grimes, said that "shadow zones" prevent communication between emergency service workers and to improve communication, Mr. Grimes wants a 65-foot cell tower built in Theodore Roosevelt County Park. However, local residents there worry about potential harmful effects of building a cell tower so close to their homes.

With the prices of cell phones declining and options expanding, cell phones are here to stay, which means that increasing the number of cellular towers is needed to service the public, and the emergency service workers who serve them. All things come with risks but maybe the town of East Hampton should research potential risks to humans, animals and the environment, just to be on the safe side.

company after another, paying pollution fines and attempting restructuring, and gilding many of them into bankruptcy, with the resulting fleecing of the bondholders.

It has not been pretty. His conquests have included a magnesium corporation called MagCorp, a steel company called Renco, and a lead producing company called Doe Run. All the bondholders have wound up holding the bag while he, without lifting a finger except to pay lawyers to walk a tightrope of legality, walked away with tens and hundreds of millions. He is currently eyeing a coal producer called Lodestar Holdings. In an article in Forbes in 2002, reporter Nathan Vardi wrote, "The Feds know Ira Rennert as a polluter who recently ducked a $900 million penalty. Bondholders would like to tear him into many small pieces." Forbes currently rates Ira Rennert's net worth at around $300 million.

Still, it is an amazing thing to see wealthy New Yorkers, having come out here to buy or build a giant $10 million mansion of perhaps 15,000 square feet, with six bedrooms, four baths, a five car garage, a formal dining room, a family room, a media room and library, a maid's quarters and numerous other amenities, suddenly one-upped by Ira Rennert. People don't like that.

And Sagaponack farmers, rightly, don't like how he has changed their once bucolic neighborhood.

Of course, the question remains — what happens twenty years from now? Will this become a hotel? A Spa Retreat? A religious school? The zoning currently allows only for a private residence on these 63 acres. But in the long run, who would pay to buy such a place for such a purpose? The Town will be hard pressed to continue to enforce the one family house zoning here. They might wind up with a ruin here.

Well, this will be the last, the Town now says. Two years into the construction, the Town passed a new law. Houses must be at least 800 square feet. But they can be no more than 20,000 square feet.

There will be just one Ira Rennert.

Army and the Air Force left Westhampton around 1960 and the airfield was purchased by Suffolk County in 1971 from the Federal Government. Today it is a vast facility, a regional airport for charter craft, and the home base of the 106th Wing of the Air National Guard, which has dark green, four-piston engine rescue planes that you can see flying overhead from time to time, and about a half dozen helicopters. They are a trained unit for air rescue at sea. When space shuttles are launched out of Cape Canaveral, these helicopters scramble over the Atlantic. And if you saw the movie The Perfect Storm, you saw a portrayal of these choppers at work.

there. Except to drive past the U. S. Open and park in Westhampton 16 miles further on.

"You'd take the bus back," he said. "Or you can go to Patchogue and get on the train going the other way."

I also called the U. S. Open office itself. They suggested I call the Long Island Rail Road. Apparently, the planners of the Open had said to one another "Shinnecock is way out east at the end of the island. We've got to figure out how people can get there." And what they hadn't figured on was there was a piece of the end of the island sticking out farther than Shinnecock. Us.

Two weeks ago, however, an arrangement was finally made between the Hampton Jitney, the County of Suffolk and the U. S. Open for buses to take people from Montauk, Amagansett, East Hampton, Wainscott, Bridgehampton, Water Mill and Southampton to take people to Shinnecock Hills from the east. County buses operated by the Jitney will leave almost every hour from those places and take you the whole way to the U. S. Open for a fare of just $1.50, exact change. These buses will take you back to those towns, also for $1.50, on an approximately hourly schedule. See hamptonjitney.com and click on U.S. Open for an exact schedule.

Will they have more than one bus for each of those trips? Tom Neely of the Jitney says they are arranging to have whatever they need to take whoever wants to go. There will be multiple buses each hour. –DR officers from The Town of Southampton, Suffolk County Police, Suffolk County Sheriff's Office, Suffolk County Park Police, and the New York State Police. Federal agents will be patrolling the grounds with bomb sniffing dogs. There will even be US military units to detect and analyze biological, chemical and radiological threats.

Whether you park at Gabreski Airport in Westhampton, take the LIRR or the Jitney, be prepared for the heightened security procedures for this year's Championship. All spectators, volunteers and staff are required to display their bar coded tickets or credentials at all times. All bar codes will be scanned for validity before entry to grounds through metal detectors. The list of items prohibited on shuttle buses or through an admissions gate include: cell phones, cell phones with photographic capabilities, noise-producing and/or electronic devices, cameras and camcorders (except during practice rounds and then no cases are allowed), televisions and/or radios, food and/or beverages, containers and/or coolers, pets (other than service animals), lawn and/or folding armchairs, bicycles, ladders, metal-spiked golf shoes, bags larger than a purse or fanny pack, weapons (regardless of permit including but not limited to firearms or knives).

In addition, male/female security personnel may personally search all individuals (men, women and children) prior to passing through the admissions gate. Searches and inspections will begin at 5 a.m. each day at the spectator parking facilities and the US Open venue.

Health / Safety

The US Open is the second largest portable food event in the US and possibly the world. Only the Olympics is larger. All food vendors from the caterers in the corporate tents to the smaller convenience providers had to submit applications and plans to the Suffolk County Health Department. These plans had to specify how fresh water will be provided; how food will be transported to the grounds, how it will be stored and how it will be prepared; how employees will be able to wash their hands to keep them sanitary. Only vendors with approved food safety plans were awarded contracts.

Even EMS and ambulance services are contracted out for an event of this size. The local community emergency service organizations have been part of the planning for this event but they aren't large enough to guarantee services to the US Open without potentially compromising residents. North Shore-Long Island Jewish Health System was awarded this contract, which includes having medical tents on the grounds. The most likely problems at an outdoor event like this in the summer are heat stroke and dehydration. However, they will also be prepared for more serious health problems such as cardiac arrest.

If you drink sufficient fluids to avoid dehydration, at some point you will need to use the "facilities." Porta-potty vendors also had to submit plans that meet the new requirements of the Suffolk County Health Department. You may not notice the new requirements but you would certainly notice if they were not met. The requirements cover the number and location of the units, how often they will be maintained for supplies, how often cleaned or exchanged out if full, how they will provide for hand washing. What they are doing for the US Open is providing hand-sanitizing stations near each group of porta-potties.

Traffic / Transportation

The best suggestion if you are driving from the west is to park at Gabreski Airport on County Route 31 in Westhampton and take the shuttle bus. If for some reason you have to drive further east than Shinnecock Hills, be sure to stay on 27 and the County Route 39. Stay alert for changes in traffic patterns and watch for police officers directing traffic. They will be at all major intersections. There are those who suggest getting around during the Open will be easier than other days due to all the efforts to keep traffic moving smoothly. It has happened before.

Public transportation is the recommended alternative. The Long Island Rail Road is providing extra trains to the temporary stop at Shinnecock Hills during the entire week of the Open, June 14-20. Eastbound LIRR trains will depart from Penn Station, Woodside, Jamaica, Mineola, Hicksville, Babylon, and Patchogue. Connecting service will be available from Brooklyn, Forest Hills and Kew Gardens.

The Hampton Jitney has added a stop at the US Open grounds both eastbound and westbound during the week.

Residents who live within the restricted traffic areas have been provided with resident stickers for their autos so they can come and go freely in the neighborhood.

A "fun fact" for those local golfers who play at Indian Island and wonder what happened to the bridge by the 7th tee. The mystery has been solved. You'll see the bridge in the pedestrian overpass from Southampton College and the temporary Shinnecock stop on the LIRR. Here's hoping we get the bridge back at Indian Island after the tournament. I understand they borrowed it for the 1995 US Open, then returned it.

And The Winner Is?

Who will prevail and become the ultimate winner of the 2004 US Open? Someone who hits 75% of the fairways. Someone who strikes the ball well and is playing with confidence.

The names most often mentioned as contenders are Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson, Jim Furyk (if his wrist is healthy), Vijay Singh, Davis Love III, Ernie Els and Chad Campbell. But it's really anybody's guess.

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

The following is an excerpt from H.T. Hamann's novel, Anthropology of an American Girl. It is the story of a young woman named Eveline as she travels from high school in the Hamptons to college in New York City in the 1980s. H.T. Hamann was born in Manhattan but went through most of her schooling in Sag Harbor and East Hampton. The novel is available at Amazon.com and in local book stores.

Chapter 8 – River

The bluestone at the base of the barn steps is washed in sunlight. The warmth rushes into my bare feet like from a reversed fall or fountain. It's an old warmth, a same warmth. I remember it as if I never left. To my right is the bed of wildflowers I planted, tangled at the base like siblings sleeping. Shooting first through the thicket is a bone-like cluster of rose vervain that Marilyn and I planted one day when she and Dad visited. We stopped at Miss Amelia's cottage in Amagansett for an antique fair, and Marilyn bought a starter tray of vervain and two Chinese loveseats that I'd admired. Dad said the seats were probably made in Pittsburgh, but I thought they had belonged to imperial Chinese children. I could see the children sitting, upright and attentive, listening to a tutor, their slippered feet dangling. When Marilyn took them to be re-covered on Grand Street, the upholsterer offered to buy them from her for $1,500. She refused, though they'd cost only $200.

My father said, "We could have bought a new car!"

"They belong to Evie," Marilyn told him, emphatically. "We never would have seen their value."

I go farther into grass, south toward the driveway beyond which lie the train tracks. There is this sensation, long lost to me, of leaving the house, of staring into sky, this very sky, with nothing before and nothing behind. There was no better place to be than the place I was, despite the little I knew and the little I had.

What I missed, what I possessed, is immunity. If modern life can be seen as something high-speed and pathogenic – that is to say, replicating and duplicating and by necessity unoriginal – then childhood by comparison is a period of blessed insusceptibility. Maybe the loss of innocence is part of some practical operation. Maybe there are lessons in its fleeting frailty. Possibly through such sacrifice we remain captivated, bound to the safekeeping of joy when we come upon it. I comb through the flower stems, wondering, am I lost, or do I remain – am I perennial? Have I aged, have I stopped becoming, or do I just prepare?

There are pilgrims who walk and walk, through years and through nations, seeking answers to questions they don't know how to formulate. Is it possible for me to go back to believing in something that I've never seen?

I walk at night in East Hampton. The world tips and turns. I walk a walk of the dead, thinking dead thoughts. Skateboards and scarecrows, tipping cows in Schwenk's field and spitting contests outside Windmill Deli. Tall twilights in November, sitting with everybody on the concrete steps of the VFW, kicking home through broad shawls of chestnut leaves, green with crispy borders like melting stars or witches' shoes. The circus star antics of boys – flagpole climbing and three to a bike. The heat of the hood of a car in summer, the cupped pop of softballs. Roast beef sandwiches with melted mozzarella from Bucket's deli and vanilla cream sodas and the way you can peel the frosting off a Hostess cupcake, that flatworm ribbon of white down the center. Snoopy cards from Marley's and square wrapping paper packs for the birthday earrings we'd buy each other at Whitmore Gallery. And the train, and the bus, the city people stumbling through the doors on a Friday, weary but ready. I don't know whether or not this is home – whether or not it would have me, whether or not I would be had by it. I know only that I reached a plateau on these streets, some dead end of understanding.

I call my mother from the payphone near

With Gina Glickman

Sake To Me

As I was putting on the final touches to my outfit and sliding into my favorite clubbing shoes, I knew it was going to be a late night. First stop was Sen Sushi in Sag Harbor. The Tipster was greeting folks in line at the front door, keeping those hungry Hamptonites happy. I guess I'm not the only one who's addicted to the Tiger Roll. Another one of my favorites at Sen is a special cocktail that's not even on the menu, but it's the best drink in the house. It's a mix of sake, cranberry juice, lime and club soda. I call it the Sake Surprise. This drink sneaks up on you slowly — and then all of the sudden, SLAM! The Sake goes straight to your head. Just ask Kelly Ripa who was flying high while dining with hubby Mark Consuelos and executive producer Michael Gelman.

My next stop, StarRoom. It's only the second weekend and the line was pouring out onto Highway 27. Inside the VIP room was Richard Johnson, and Lizzie Grubman, who was ripping it up on the dance floor with Touching Evil Star Jeffrey Donovan. Donovan was enjoying the VIP treatment and his first time in the Hamptons. He said, "I can't believe I've lived in New York for over ten years and I've never been here, this is the greatest!" At a nearby table, "Alias" Star Bradley Cooper took a break this weekend from shooting a movie in NYC with Vince Vaughn, to snuggle up with Paula Froelich from Page Six. Just in case you haven't heard, you can expect to see Lizzie around the Hamptons and a regular at StarRoom all summer while MTV is shooting her very own reality series that is scheduled to air later this year.

Meanwhile, Dennis Rodman hosted a party at Tavern in Southampton. Rodman is the official spokesperson for a natural enhancement drug for men and woman called, EnjoyRX and EnduranceRX. Rodman threw the party to help raise awareness — among other things.

Great News for brunch lovers! Those of you Hamptonites who need to fulfill those insatiable food cravings after a long night of partying can join Jon Stewart and his very pregnant wife, Tracy, who were dining this past weekend at Jeff and Eddy's in Sag Harbor next to "Sopranos" star, Aida Turturro. Jeff and Eddy's just started serving breakfast daily.

Until next week — Life is short! You only live once, party on!

Gina Glickman can be seen every Tuesday, Thursday and Sundays on News 12 Long Island's "What's Hot in the Hamptons."

BREAKING NEWS

Sag Harbor Sign News

The fate of the Sag Harbor movie theater sign seems to be in good hands now. Owner of the theater Gerry Mallow and Brenda Siemer, who is leading the movement to save the sign, have reached an agreement. Mallow will not use the new block letter sign, and will instead put the old sign back up once it is restored. To raise money for this estimated $20,000 restoration, Jean Luc Klefeld of JL East restaurant will host a preview opening of his new restaurant, JLX in Sag Harbor, in honor of the sign. 100% of the proceeds will go to the restoration. The event will be hosted by Sag Harbor Mayor Ed Deyermond and Brenda Siemer, and will take place at JLX on Thursday, June 17 from 6-9 p.m. Tickets for dinner and cocktails are $150, or you can arrive at 9 p.m. for cash bar and art auction. All of the proceeds from the bar will also go to the restoration. Artist Curt Hoppe is donating a print of his well-known and much beloved painting of the Sag Harbor sign at night. This is truly an opportunity for the whole community to come together for this cause. For more information, see the Benefits section of this paper or call Brenda Siemer at 537-1472.

Chase Painting Saved (Sort Of)

The William Merritt Chase self-portrait, whose fate was in the balance after it was auctioned off on May 19, will reside in the Parrish Art Museum after all. The anonymous bidder, who paid $120,000 at the New York Sotheby's auction, is loaning the painting to the museum, and it is expected to be displayed with the permanent collection. For now, it is in the Parrish vault with the rest of the museum's permanent collection. More details of when the painting will be exhibited will be released as details are figured out. It has also been learned that the Parrish had someone at the auction who participated in the spirited bidding, but retired when the price reached $100,000.

Plum TV

The new East End television station, Plum TV, aired June 4. Its shows feature local interests and personalities on Cablevision channel 18. There is a morning show hosted by TV anchors Kelly Choi, Lawrence Kaplan, and Gina Glickman aired from Wednesday through Sunday beginning at 8 a.m. Local residents like Steven Gaines, a writer for New York Magazine, and musician Nancy Atlas have already signed on to host segments. Plum TV is intended to emphasize local events, politics, sports, and weather.

Save That Tree!

The East Hampton Town Board has agreed to pass a new ordinance that will restrict the amount of clearing permitted on private property. The law will dictate the percentage of natural vegetation and woodland that can be removed. It is intended to protect not only the beauty of the town, but also the groundwater. It would apply to all residential properties over 10,999 square feet. On a half-acre, it would be legal to clear 75% of the lot. On an acre, one-half could be cleared.

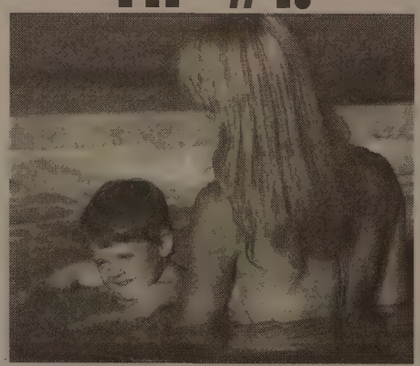
White's. A stranger answers. His Manchester accent is swarthy. Hello? In back there are sounds of a party. The one for Jann. I ask for Irene.

"Hang on," he says. There is a portly plastic clunk as the receiver drops. I hear him shout, "Get down and give us twenty!" Then raucous laughter, then unanimous counting. One, two, thirteen, fifteen, twenty!

Cheers and more shouting and more counting and the party again, and when no one retrieves the phone, I hang up. The heels of my socks are damp from popped blisters, so I sit on the back step of the pharmacy, tearing away the dead skin. Something blue to consider is the memory of my father flexing the backs of my new school shoes to soften them, bending the patent leather until it became pliable, surely that is a type of love.

GEORGE'S UNBIASED HOW TO UNWIND TIP #1.



You moved out to the Hamptons to unwind.

To escape the pressure; the noise; the pace; the traffic.

Now, if you could only convince the kids to relax a little more and bring out the grandchildren more often... Everything would be perfect.

You want them to relax? Get a pool.

A Kazdin Pool, of course.

We've been designing, building and maintaining pools here for over 30 years.

That's a long time and a lot of pools.

And a lot of awards.

And a lot of happy, relaxed people.

We can't help you get the kids out here more often, but we sure can help make their stay more relaxing.

Escape the usual.

We move so many pianos we could give lessons.

In fact we do. The professionals from Despatch Moving and Storage that pad, pack, load, drive, and unload your possessions have received hours and hours of training long before we let them touch any of your belongings, let alone your Baby.

Despatch began moving people in 1910. Even then they realized the key to successful moves wasn't just strong backs and powerful trucks. It was heart. Caring about the people they were moving and the things that made their house a home were more important.

Today, the thank you letters we receive from our clients are music to our ears. Many of the words used strike a familiar chord – careful, friendly, understanding, professional, courteous, and efficient. We're not surprised. Moving pianos is not our only forte. Our staff knows how to baby your antiques, collectibles, fine art, furniture, as well as your floors and walls. In short, if you're planning a move call us — but only if you want to be babied in grand style.

Celebrating 70 Years On Madison Avenue

Duboeuf's First Prize Label Beaujolais & Maconnais On Sale!

All of the delicious reds of Beaujolais and crisp, delightful Macon Chardonnays listed here feature the First Prize Label, indicating that each wine has won first place at the prestigious, annual Villefranche, Macon and Saint Vincent wine fairs. Monsieur Duboeuf selected these first prize-winning cuvees especially for Sherry-Lehmann.

1er Prix Concours Villefranche — 2002 — 1er Prix Concours Villefranche

First Prize Winning Label Reds	SALE BOTTLE	SALE CASE
BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 2002	6.95	83.40
First Prize This fresh offering displays uncommon depth and richness. Its bright, lively fruit aromas and complexity make it delicious. (4400)
CHENAS 2002	8.95	107.40
First Prize One of Beaujolais' lesser-known Crus, Chenas combines power and finesse with a spicy character and floral aromas. (4403)
CHIROUBLES 2002	9.49	113.88
First Prize Fresh, fruity and supple with a charming bouquet of violets, this engaging Cru is one of our most popular! (4404)
COTE DE BROUILLY 2002	8.95	107.40
First Prize The character of the Cote de Brouilly comes from its soil. A former volcano, the hill on which the vineyards lie is rich, fertile and rocky. Comparatively headier than other crus, apricot is the predominant flavor. (4402)
FLEURIE 2002	10.49	125.88
First Prize "Tight, with raspberry and boysenberry confiture flavors held in check by lively acidity and slightly muscular tannins. Dark, ripe and juicy, with purity and balance." -Wine Spectator Rated 90! (4408)
JULIENAS 2002	9.95	119.40
First Prize "Solid, with juicy, dark berry fruit, bramble and spice notes, and a chocolaty finish. Has the vintage's grip and flesh, with a nice, silky texture." – Wine Spectator Rated 88! (4411)
MORGON 2002	9.95	119.40
First Prize Known for having the fruit of Beaujolais and the charm of Burgundy, Morgon is a lusty, full-bodied Cru with touches of cherry, kirsch and apricot. (4405)
MOULIN-A-VENT 2002	10.95	131.40
First Prize This outstanding Cru boasts vivid aromas of violets and roses. (4433)
REGNIE 2002	7.49	89.88
First Prize "Grapey and floral, French red, with silky black cherry and plum fruit, and ripe, juicy texture," comments Wine Spectator." (4401)
ST.-AMOUR 2002	10.95	131.40
First Prize "Lush blackberry and raspberry fruit, vanilla, spice and mocha notes, and a long, silky finish. Concentrated, ripe and delicious. Shows the structure of the vintage." – Wine Spectator Rated 89! (4434)

DUBOEUF'S 2002 VINTAGE SAMPLER $109.95
Twelve Bottles – Consists of one of each of the ten 2002 reds and two 2002 whites shown here bearing an asterisk (*). (6605)

Duboeuf's First Prize 2003 Beaujolais Arrive!

1er Prix Concours de la Saint-Vincent à Mâcon — 2003 — 1er Prix Concours de la Saint-Vincent à Mâcon

2003 was an exceptional year in the vineyards of Beaujolais. It was one of the sunniest and hottest years on record. Consequently the wines display outstanding quality but unfortunately there is a much smaller quantity available than in previous years. The first of the 2003s are just reaching our cellars.

THE NOTEBOOK PREMIERS

Even the usually composed Peggy Siegal crowd couldn't stop their tears at the preview of New Line Cinema's, The Notebook, based on the Nicholas Sparks novel. It's a wonderful, romantic story of young summer love, filled with twists and turns. The screening took place Saturday at the Sag Harbor Theater, a location that could have been used in the 1940s-set film itself. The film opens in about a week, and if you want a period piece with no violence and a lush plot this is a movie for you. The media savvy crowd did get faked out because they started applauding after a scene that appeared to end the movie, but they were wrong as director Nick Cassevetes had another turn to take the audience around. The after-party took place in Southampton at the newly opened Dragonbar.

JOHN STEINBECK MEMORIAL

Photos and Text by Tom W. Ratcliffe III

The John Steinbeck Memorial Event at Bay Street was deemed by veteran philanthropists and experts on the social scene as one of the best events in the Hamptons in years! There was laughter and tears. The event was held by the Sag Harbor Lions Club and co-sponsored by Prudential, Keyspan and others. A bust of John Steinbeck was unveiled by his sister, Jean Boone, with a call for memorabilia for the planned John Steinbeck archival center. Special presenters included Edward Albee, Joe Pintauro, Jean Boone and Roger Rosenblatt.

THE ARTISTS ALLIANCE OF EAST HAMPTON

Photos and Text by Kimberly Goff

The Artists Alliance of East Hampton gathered at hot spot, Bamboo Restaurant, in East Hampton for good cheer and networking. The Alliance is looking for new ways to unite the artistic community. Tom Steele, President of the Alliance, and his wife, Ellen Dooley, the VP, are working hard to build membership, actively involve the members, and increase communication. With a new office, the Internet and other great tools are strongly utilized. More informal events are planned.

Divine Country Cafe

46455 Route 48 (North Road)
Southold, NY

By Susan Whitney Simm

Whether you are a weekend warrior, day-tripper or lucky year-round resident, summertime dining on Long Island's East End is all about casual ambience and fresh food. With such an incredible array of local ingredients at their disposal, area chefs tend to eschew fussy preparations in favor of simpler fare that allows the natural flavors of our just-picked and just-fished bounty to shine through.

At Southold newcomer Divine Country Café, the emphasis is on spicy Caribbean cuisine and top flight ingredients, which are quickly becoming the hallmarks of co-owners Barbara Michelson's and Tiny Martin's menus and specials. Barbara, a graduate of the famous Paris cooking school Cordon Bleu, and Tiny, a native Antiguan with a wealth of experience in West Indian cooking, offer some excellent Caribbean specialties along with locally inspired panini sandwiches (grilled in a special press), salads and daily specials.

But first, let's talk coffee. Ever since the storefront café opened in early spring, I have gone nowhere else for my daily iced latte when I'm out here at our house in Cutchogue. Whether you like your coffee plain or fancy, cold or hot, the quality of the espresso here is so exceptional that it actually tastes as good as it smells. If you are a devotee of the bean, you'll know exactly what I mean.

Along with that morning cup I also often enjoy a warm slice of broccoli quiche made with farm-fresh eggs, imported Gruyere cheese, and excellent short pastry. This is so flavorful you won't believe you ever ate those old cardboard-crusted versions popular in the 80s. But if you prefer a sweet, Barbara's Cordon Bleu talents are very much in evidence, not only in the best chocolate croissants available on the North Fork, but also in the tart and tangy lemon squares, flaky current scones, and wonderful, fudgy brownies, either with nuts or sans. Egg sandwiches are also delicious, especially as paninis.

Speaking of sandwiches, the café's lunch menu includes a wide variety, both grilled and plain. Garlicky hummus and curry chicken salad with grapes are among my favorites, but the standouts here once again are the paninis. A recent daily special, made with local asparagus pared with ripe Fontina cheese (the real thing from Italy) was luscious.

All soups are completely homemade, and Barbara obviously enjoys making tasty cold versions for the warmer months. Tossed salads are freshly made to order from local greens, and the Caesar sports the BEST dressing I have had in a long time, either on eastern Long Island or in Manhattan. Not creamy, it is truly classic in texture. Ask for an extra container with your salad, which you can order with grilled chicken, shrimp or steak.

Also recommended are the appetizer portions of chicken and beef patties, Caribbean-style baked specialties, in a curry-tinged melt-in-your-mouth buttery crust. Pair with a salad for a perfect lunch.

Nightly specials range from grilled flank steak to sautéed scallops with leeks, and on Friday and Saturday nights Caribbean fare takes center stage. Spicy jerk chicken, beef or shrimp is served on skewers with assorted vegetables over rice, and mahogany-hued baby back ribs, basted in rum and molasses, are tender and flavorful. Curry preparations here are the real thing, bearing no resemblance to the often powder-textured offerings elsewhere. Tiny obviously takes great pride in her West Indian heritage, and she uses that pride with abandon to create authentic, flavor-packed dishes.

For dessert, try those lemon squares along with some refreshing tropical fruit salad, kissed with a hint of coconut and mint. But if you have the room, don't miss the coconut crème brulee. The creamy custard with tiny shards of fresh coconut, nestled under a crunchy lid of glazed sugar, is worth the calories.

Divine Country offers fresh iced tea and assorted bottled beverages in addition to the coffee drinks, but does not have a liquor license. You are, however, welcome to BYOB and that is exactly what we did on a recent occasion. Just don't forget wine glasses if you're bringing wine and don't want to drink out of paper cups. This is a very casual establishment where the cutlery is plastic and the plates paper, so if your wine won't taste right unless it's sipped from Riedel, pack a couple goblets and a corkscrew and pretend you're going on a picnic. It IS fun.

Catering is available for parties large and small, and Barbara and Tiny have a state-of-the-art "kitchen on wheels" just for that purpose. Although the pair will cater a wedding, they prefer to focus on smaller, casual parties, Caribbean-style. Separate catering menus are available, and all parties are tailored to the client's needs and wishes. But dates are filling quickly, so inquire well ahead of time to avoid disappointment.

Co-owners Barbara Michelson and Alphenic "Tiny" Martin

The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Dining Destinations

What's Cookin'

'Tis the time of year when we anxiously start scouting out our favorite farmstands for signs of summer. Horseradish, asparagus, and rhubarb herald the season as strawberries, arugula, and lettuces follow on their heels.

While this process never fails to excite even dormant culinary instincts, perhaps those who get the most inspired are our local chefs. After a long winter hoping for freshness to arrive from around the globe, these masters of the range look ravenously forward to slicing and dicing the best the East End has to offer. And while the lushness of our mid-summer is indeed incomparable, it's always the sweet beginning that stirs us most.

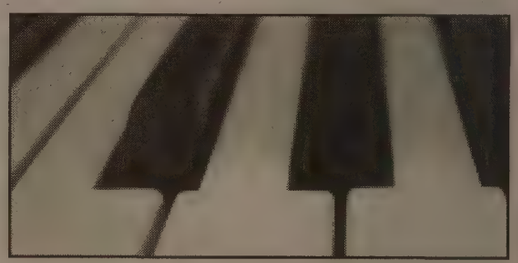
Big Event Of The Week

Pianist John Kamitsuka Performs At Peconic Landing Sunday, June 13, Greenport

Virtuoso pianist John Kamitsuka began formal piano studies at the age of five and by twelve had performed in solo recitals and as a soloist with symphony orchestras. He later pursued doctoral studies at the State University of New York at Stony Brook with Gilbert Kalish and Richard Goode, and currently works with Sophia Rosoff in New York. Mr. Kamisuka performs throughout the United States, South America, Europe and Japan. He has played at Alice Tully Hall in Lincoln Center, at the 92nd Street Y and at the Weill Recital Hall at Carnegie Hall in New York, and at Queen Elizabeth



Hall, St. John's Smith Square and St. Martin-in-the-Fields in London. He has also been on a fifteen-city tour of Japan including recitals at Yamaha Hall in Tokyo and Piloti Hall in Osaka. As orchestral soloist, John Kamitsuka has performed Bach, Beethoven and Brahms concertos with the New York Chamber Orchestra, the Bard Music Festival Ensemble, and the Sao Paulo Symphony. On Sunday, June 13, Mr. Kamisuka will perform the music of Bach, Brahms and Prokofiev at 3 p.m. in the auditorium at Peconic Landing in Greenport, which is located at 1500 Brecknock Drive (off Route 48 just east of the light). Tickets are $15. Call 734-7696.

From the NY Times, Mrs. JoAnne Starkey says:
"Mr. Guy Peuch's crab cakes are legendary, perhaps the best on Long Island."

From Newsday, Mr. Peter Gianotti says:
"It's easily the most impressive restauant to open in Riverhead since potatoes began giving way to grapes! Excellent main course; pork chop finishes with nubbins of garlic and sage. Also first rate, the Niman Ranch dry-rubbed rib steak. Top desserts: lemon tart, tart tatin and chocolate-hazelnut puck."

From Dan's Papers, Mr. Roy Bradbrook says:
"Probably the best lobster bisque we have ever tasted; pate with pistachio and truffles was superb, vibrant duck a l'orange with some incredible wild rice, impressive desserts. Guy Feuch is among the very top tier chefs in this region."

ners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03). {Di,S,Sh}

Claudio's. In its 133rd year of continuous family ownership. Claudio's symbolizes the North Fork much as the Montauk Lighthouse represents the South Fork. The lovingly preserved bar was rescued from the bowery in 1885. You're truly drinking in history when enjoying a famed martini there. New chef Michael Ruggiero cleverly traces the restaurant's history. He's not only maintained Claudio's time-honored favorites, but his specials reflect founder Manuel Claudio's Portugese and Mediterranean ancestry. And if you like your oysters raw, sea-fresh and plump, you'll do no better from here to Chesapeake Bay. 111 Main St., Greenport. 477-0627. Entrees, $17-$26. (Bradbrook, 7/25/03).

The Clubhouse at Indian Island. Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95.(Bradbrook, 4/16/04.)

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [Br,D]

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03). {Pu}.

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01). [G]

Ile de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs' legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02). [C,H,J]

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

"TACTILITY " AT ARLENE BUJESE

Arlene Bujese has given a new twist to her annual "Methods and Material" exhibit, changing its title to "Tactility." But the idea remains: the use of texture to convey style and theme. Of course, the sense of touch is a potent way of communicating, not only via the arts but human behavior. Insufficient touching on this level can lead to health disorders, such as allergies, speech problems and even death.

"Veteran's Day," by Steve Soreff

Religion and medicine are just two professions in which touch is essential for ceremonial (ie. baptisms) and curative purposes. Suffice it to say that touch remains important from birth to death.

The sense of touch is variously translated to serve diverse functions in the current show. Steve Soreff's work becomes a political statement with his arrangement of knives, each one assuming the shape of a cross. The point is clear. (Pardon the pun.) The relationship between religion and killing is as relevant today as it ever was.

Margaret Kerr's brick "rugs" are the very essence of texture, their raison d'etre, so to speak. The artist's fine sense of design, however, enhances the palpability, the arrangement of parts giving transcendence to what is earthbound and tangible.

Alex Russo's "Beauty and the Beast" offers abstract images that can be seen and touched, juxtaposing figures that are more illusive and distant. Thus, we have the here and now along with the what might be.

Ronnie Chalif's marble sculpture, "Queen of Spades," imbues the idea of texture as parts of a whole, at once perceived as an entity within itself and also separate pieces which impart power and influence.

Several sculptural pieces use texture differently. For example, works by Jim Gemake employs weights (adding literal weight to the compositions) and found objects (in " Weight and C"): here we have three - dimensional rather than "flat" texture.

Sydney Butchkes' "Metamorphose" is an intriguing use of texture, where a hand is not quite finished: a few fingers are missing parts. A viewer may not notice this slight deviation from the normal, our powers of organizing visual data giving the piece textural "closure" where none exists.

Tom Wasik's, "Forest For the Trees," is, in this critic's view, a satiric comment on texture, although that was probably not the artist's intention. It is simply the idea that density (texture) masks the details, like trees do. In this case, it is Mr. Wasik's geometric forms which signify the trees.

The current show will be on view at the Arlene Bujese Gallery until June 17.

Honoring the Artist: Charles Dooman

If you're attracted to the beautiful car on this week's cover, we don't blame you one bit. We also don't fault you if you don't know its name or can't recall ever seeing it drive down the street. The auto in question is a 1935 Amilcar and unless you're a collector or fan of the Hamptons Concours d'Elegance, it's no wonder you're mystified. In fact, the cover vehicle was last year's "Best of Show" at the Hamptons event now celebrating its fifth anniversary on the East End.

If we're still in the dark about the car's history, we can always talk to the cover's artist and car enthusiast, Charles Dooman, which is just what we did. But not in person, because Mr. Dooman was in Greenwich, Connecticut last week seeing the original car and participating in the area's own Concours d'Elegance as the site coordinator. We could, of course, see him this week at the Hampton's event. His involvement is a little less complex as an exhibiting artist.

According to Mr. Dooman, the pre-war Amilcar was built in Paris, France, as anyone can tell who's familiar with the hood's medallion. This ornament is truly unique, featuring a flying horse. The artist combined details from the grill and a worm's eye view with a forest green background to capture the car's personality. Mr. Dooman's attention to details, in fact, gives the vehicle an abstract quality.

Only cars of class and beauty are displayed at the Concours. "The automobiles are for ogling and caressing, " Mr. Dooman explains.

And the artist can include himself among the oglers. While he's not a collector, Mr. Dooman has always loved cars; the first time he bought a new car, it was a Porsche 911. "It was the high point of my life. The low point was when I sold it," he recalls. "But I couldn't refuse the offer. I bought a couple of Mercedes with the money."

It's one thing to enjoy cars, but it's quite another to paint them.

While Mr. Dooman loved art, he majored in business at Wichita State College, perhaps due to his father's advice that he couldn't make a living as an artist. Yet Mr. Dooman proved his parent wrong.

"I was in the restaurant business for 15 years, working as a maitre d' and running all the Wendy's establishments in Wichita. One day I just walked away from it all. I became a painter full time."

It's apparent that Mr. Dooman made the right decision. Now he has time to spend with his family, work on his paintings and travel the Concours circuit. Such traveling finds him in a variety of places, like Dallas, Denver, Los Angeles, and, naturally, the Hamptons.

We asked Mr. Dooman what venues he preferred. His answer was surprising: "It's not the place that's important. It's the people who are there. Old friends or new people I have met along the way. I always take one of my daughters with me, too. We sometimes travel as much as 1500 miles. I'll be gone a month this time."

Asked if he paints when he's on his "road trips," Mr. Dooman answers, "I take a watercolor set with me. I can sit down and make a drawing in five minutes. It's much better than sketching or taking a picture.

"And there's always something unique to draw no matter where I am. I'll be painting until the day I die."

Entertainment In The Hamptons

All The South Fork's A Stage

Have you noticed there's been a lot of professional theater here in the last dozen years? The renaissance began in 1992 when Bay Street Theatre opened in Sag Harbor. Within a year or two, Manhattan's famous Actors Studio did a summer series of staged new-play readings at East Hampton's John Drew Theater, and the next summer, playwright John Guare and the Juilliard School's theater department did staged readings at the John Drew. Then Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton started, and the Hamptons Shakespeare Festival came to be.

The begetting continued. Josh Gladstone, a co-founder of Hamptons Shakespeare Festival, was hired by Guild Hall to revive the John Drew Theater. Jonathan Peters started Spindletop Productions, and, this year, a collective of local theater people formed Naked Stage to publicly read new and classic plays. There is also a high level of community and children's theater, both resident and "imported," on local stages year round, and Bellport's Gateway Playhouse produces five months of first-class American musical theater. So why do all these groups feel they are struggling for audiences?

This question and others came up at a frank panel discussion between local theater and media professionals and the public, all invited by Naked Stage to Guild Hall on June 5. The panel included Bay Street Theatre's executive director Stephen Hamilton, Jonathan Peters of Spindletop Productions, Michelle Stark of Suffolk County's Office of Cultural Affairs, Sarah Hunnewell of Hamptons Theatre Company, Amy Prosser of Hamptons Shakespeare Festival, theater writer Lee Davis of The Southampton Press, Josh Gladstone of the John Drew Theater, Steve Haweeli of advertising and public relations firm Wordhampton, Peter Sephton of the Sheffield (UK) Theatre Company, and Dan Rattiner, editor and publisher of this newspaper. Kate Meuth, Josh Perl and Jon Barker of Naked Stage acted as moderators.

Kate's first question, "Why is theater important?," was never directly answered by anyone on the panel, so I will attempt to. Theater is a performing art and, like all the arts, it is the artists' reflection and comment on their personal, inner world and/or the outer world. Over centuries, human desires and needs haven't changed – although how artists express themselves has – that is why ancient Greek plays or Shakespeare or Moliere or Arthur Miller's work can be as relevant today as when written. Playwrights are the conscience, bane, scourge, ethical/moral voice and mirrors of our society.

Theater enriches our lives but it is a learned experience. Baby boomers and earlier generations were taken to live theater by their parents. They felt the special unspoken bond between audience and performers. Gen Xers, now in their thirties, primarily grew up with television, video games, and movies as entertainment – and the next generation now makes their own videos and DVDs. New audiences must be taught to experience live theater.

The East End of Long Island today is a varied society with many socio-economic levels and ethnic groups. There is the possibility of many types of theater for different audiences. So, how does a local theater group find an audience? "A theater producer here walks a tightrope. One must strike a balance between what an audience wants [often done through audience questionnaires or surveys] and what is best for the long-term interest of that theater," said Steve Hamilton. He later quipped, ruefully, "I am probably the only producer in theater history who lost money putting on A Christmas Carol."

Sarah Hunnewell of Hampton Theatre Company agreed. "We would like to do thought-provoking theater but audiences seem to want entertainment." Peter Sephton chimed in, "Theater must excite, challenge and entertain!"

Lee Davis reminded everyone that, with competition from outdoor activities, movies and television, "theater must lure people – so, on the East End, theater must first be exciting and entertaining."

Jonathan Peters mentioned how Spindletop Productions attracts audiences. "Advertising and marketing are key. You must get the word out that your production is on, and that must now include getting sponsors."

Suffolk County's Michelle Stark agreed, but warned, "Large corporate sponsors only account for two percent of arts underwriting, so you must reach out to local businesses."

"Another way to make a presence in the community is by working with the public schools," added Amy Prosser of Hamptons Shakespeare Festival. Steve Hamilton emphatically concurred. "Arts education in the community is very important, especially since the arts are the first things cut in tight school budgets."

The panelists all agreed that local theater must be affordable. Some of the suggestions offered: do dinner/theater packages with local restaurants; sell season subscriptions at a slight discount; offer discounted tickets; create an East End theater coali-

Take Five 2004 with Jan Silver

This is a blockbuster weekend – theater, comedy, cabaret, klezmer concert, special cinema and benefit events. It's the Parrish Art Museum's "Landscape Pleasures" weekend and Hamptons Auto Classic/Concours d'Elegance weekend. There's a garden party for Madoo Conservancy's 10th anniversary and the "Heart of the Hamptons" gala for the American Heart Association. Chris Barrett and Eileen Fulton perform a cabaret show to benefit Alternatives Counseling Service on Friday in East Hampton, and Mercedes Ruehl enacts the new one-woman show about art dealer Peggy Guggenheim on Saturday. For details, read on.

THEATER

Manhattan's Primary Stages and the John Drew Theater present Mercedes Ruehl as art dealer Peggy Guggenheim in a staged reading of Lanie Robertson's new one-woman play Woman Before A Glass: A Triptych in Four Parts. The performance is at East Hampton's John Drew Theater Saturday, 8 p.m. Tickets are $30 ($28 for Guild Hall members) at the box office, 631-324-4050.

Chris Barrett

Several "New York Improv Comedy All-Stars" will be at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, including Rick Younger and Sherry Davey. Tickets are $25 and $35, available at the WHBPAC box office, 631-288-1500.

Next Tuesday, June 15, Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre begins previews of its next mainstage production, Tom Stoppard's farce Rough Crossing. Tues. is pay-what-you-can night for tickets purchased at the box office starting at 11 a.m. The show runs through Sun. July 4 with Wed. and Sat. matinees; call the box office for tickets ($35-65) at 631-725-9500.

MUSIC

Popular cabaret singer/pianist Chris Barrett and soap opera star Eileen Fulton will perform on Friday, 8 p.m., at East Hampton's Guild Hall in a benefit for Alternatives Counseling Service, a local substance-abuse counseling service. The first half of the concert spotlights Chris's recent cabaret show "I Gotta Make My Own Music." After intermission, Chris and Eileen will perform the solos and duets most often requested during his 26 years performing here. Meet the performers at a reception after the show. Tickets are a $40 donation to Alternatives, at the door, or by calling 631-283-4440.

The Jewish Center of the Hamptons' Summer Institute celebrates American Judaism this weekend with films, guest speakers and a klezmer music concert on Saturday at 8 p.m. with Yale Strom & Hot P'stromi ($25). On Sunday, musicologist and radio host Thomas Boyd will talk about "The Jews Who Led the Band…from Tin Pan Alley to Jazz, Gershwin to Dylan" at 7:30 p.m. (no charge). The public is welcome. For a schedule of events and tickets, call 631-324-9858 or go online to www.jcoh.org.

tion or theater guild with a website and brochure featuring all members' productions.

Many of the recommendations came from the audience. Bill Burford of Bay Street Theatre noted, "Producing new plays is extremely difficult and risky." One woman in the audience criticized Naked Stage's last reading as being "amateurish," so Peter Sephton cautioned "experimental theater requires editorial control."

Steve Hamilton summed up: "There is opportunity here for all levels of theater, from readings, like Naked Stage's, to full-scale productions."

Dan Rattiner added that Dan's Papers has started an online Registry of events in the Hamptons, including theater. It can be accessed directly at www.danspapers.com (then click on "Dan's Registry"). Some upcoming theater productions are Tom Stoppard's farce Rough Crossing at Bay Street Theatre (June 15-July 4), Kaufman and Hart's classic comedy You Can't Take It With You (Hampton Theatre Company, June 17-27), Naked Stage's reading of James LaRocca's new play 44 Sunset Park (June 22, Guild Hall) and Hampton Shakespeare Festival's production of The Comedy of Errors (July 28-August 20).

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

The Day After Tomorrow

Forcefully, we continue to march backwards into the future.

It isn't very odd to consider motion pictures to be so powerful that, like a big truck's engine, they can be terribly strong in reverse. Two huge-budgeted movies have taken profoundly serious, well-intended subjects and, for commercial considerations, have had the altruistic messages boomerang into reverse influence – much to the delight of the current ruling party and its leaders. In Troy, the filming of Homer's Iliad, the reccurring theme of the stupid vanity of war went "Boin-n-ng!" and now the threat of global warming has been put into cold storage by an almost funny updating of the old "Shake'n' Bake" disaster flicks Towering Inferno and Earthquake. The Day After Tomorrow may not have been made as a comedy but, it has our little warrior leader laughing all the way to the bank of the reversal of fortunes – ours, not theirs.

Reverse influences are the friendly-fire unfortunate results of carelessness. It'll be a cold day in July (hey, that's the movie's plot) when a cheese-inspired, ratty disaster movie will cause changes for the good. Towering Inferno has not made tall buildings safer from fire and Poseidon Adventure has not given us a right side up world. The writer/director of Day After Tomorrow is not for safety first. He's Roland Emmerich, the guy who demolished the White House in 1996's Independence Day and flattened our dignity with his 1998's Godzilla. Now, with co-writer Jerry Nachmanoff, he has gleaned reams of scientific data to stuff into the mouths of the cast. That is, when those mouths are not already choked by wind, water and/or ice. Most of the wordage comes from a lock-jawed serious paleoclimatologist, Dennis Quaid, who rushes to D.C. to warn the White House of the coming bad weather. He'd been on an Antarctic ice shelf that dropped off. That cinched it. Things were going to get rough but, will they listen?

In a bit of intended satire, the vice president is very Dick Cheney-like and the President is a dolt who asks the veep, "What d'ya think we should do?"

Besides, only the upper part of the earth will be destroyed – losing New York and San Francisco on up might suit the administration just fine. Conservatives might also enjoy the reversal of hoards of U.S. citizens swarming across the border into Mexico.

The multitudinous cast of computerized characters who flee, run, dash, die or survive boil down to a precious few real live actors. There's Quaid's son, Jake Gyllenhaal, in N.Y.C., and his friends like Emmy Rossum who take refuge in the N.Y. Public Library. As expected in this type of movie, they're joined by a very savvy homeless man and an even wiser dog. Can you guess who survives?

Here today, gone tomorrow will no doubt be the fate of The Day After Tomorrow but for now those who enjoy a nice disaster or two, or three or four or five will be delighted by so many, including hailstones the size of crystal balls. Whoops! There goes Tokyo and gasp! the famous Hollywood sign. Just don't think it will wipe out further disasters – like unnecessary wars.

theater review: follies

The wonderous Weissman Follies take the stage with their lavish costumes and creative laments at the Avram Theatre at Southampton College in order to bid adieu to their claim to fame. The Southampton Players, along with their director, Michael Disher, bring together Dimitri Weissman's former ladies of splendor, allowing the infamous follies to reminisce and challenge their own paths in life. This imaginative production, based on the book by James Goldman and featuring much of Steven Sondheim's musical genius, indulges the senses while reaching out to the audience with its down-to-earth portrayal of human instincts when dealing with the heart.

Set in 1971, Follies takes place at the first and last reunion arranged by the Follies creator himself, Dimitri Weissman. The Follies had been the singing and dancing beauties in his ingenuitive masterpiece productions back in the times of the war, and as the play opens, the group comes together again at the Weis Theatre, only this time the theatre is crumbling in its last days before its destiny of becoming a parking lot. The Follies step into the theatre and are each stricken with memories and emotions that the theatre has held within its walls for the past thirty years as the members of the group moved on with their lives.

Each Folly proudly wears a sash stating the year when she had been part of the extravagant feather-and-sequins production. Now mature adults, the group wanders through familiar motions and conversations that were the groundwork for who they had grown up to become. And although time had passed since they had been in the bright light, it's amazing to watch how even time can't break up how close the group had been. In a musical number called "Who's That Woman?" led by the extraordinary Stella Deems, played by Andrea Gross, the

Mary Grace Sheppard and Vay David

Follies pick up their mirrors and sing the tunes of yesterday as if nothing had changed.

Two couples are also reintroduced, creating a tornado of confusing emotions for all four characters involved. Ben and Phyllis Stone, played by Rusty Kransky and Sue Vinsky, and Sally and Buddy Plummer, played by Terry Struble and Mark Strecker, were a fearless foursome growing up and have since married. However, there are hints of regret, jealousy and unrequited love among the four, which lead to an exploration of the truths of the past and present. In a number of musical laments, including "Too Many Mornings," performed by Ben and Sally, the couples face heartfelt truths and the unfortunate realities of then and now.

Through a wonderful series of outstanding song and dance performances, the group begins to come to terms with the choices they made in life. Some encountered successes while others were not so lucky. Still others would not change a single thing, holding on to regret as their only safety blanket. And all the while, there is a sense of duality to each of the characters. While their mature selves grapple with feelings from way back in the day, their younger selves follow through the motions alongside them. By the youngsters mimicking their present selves, they create an extraordinary shadow effect on stage. These "ghosts" of childhood innocence are what truly give a sense of depth to the characters, allowing them again to feel the embracing magic of love and the horrible sting of heartache.

The transcendence of time, a theme that is followed beautifully throughout the play, is very much emphasized by the graceful dancing and grand ballads sung by the characters in their past and present form. It gives way to the illusion of the future, unable to be foretold by the audience or even the characters themselves. Using the backdrop of the theatre, Follies explores the sometimes harsh reality that choices are made for a reason, and that everyone must come to terms with their choices in the end.

–Clara Jablonski

This excellent production of Follies, directed and choreographed by Michael Disher and performed by the Southampton Players, will be on stage at the Avram Theatre at Southampton College for the weekends of June 11-13, 2004 and June 18-20, 2004, at 8 p.m. on Fridays/ Saturdays and 5 p.m. on Sundays. Tickets are $15/$10 for students and seniors, and reservations are recommended. For more information and tickets, please call the box office at 287-8899.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

I love a good steak but find we rarely eat it. Preparing one at home can be a challenge, as most home ovens lack the intense heat of a professional restaurant stove or grill. And then there is the cut. Sirloin steaks far outsell all other steaks purchased by the home cook. Yet, depending on which section the meat of the sirloin is cut from, there are parts that can be quite tough. This brings me around to a tenderer but pricier cut such as the New York strip steak or the porterhouse. I opted for firm-textured, well-marbled boneless strips for the recipe below.

Never having forgotten my first taste of fresh rosemary garlic scented Tuscan steak a la Fiorentina, I went that route to marinate my strip steaks. The steaks were grilled to the springy-to-the-touch doneness with the poke of a finger. They emerged crusted with a deliciously reddish pink juicy center. After staring at a partially filled bottle of wine on my work counter for any number of days I decided to prepare a quick shallot red wine butter sauce. While the sauce is a delicious embellishment, the well-seared steak can stand on its own.

With spinach locally available and a husband who loves a good baked potato (as do I), I tossed the potatoes together seasoned with garlic and nutmeg and baked the gratin until they were crisp and the spinach sweetly tender. With Father's Day close at hand this manly meal may be just the celebratory ticket.

GRILLED STRIP STEAK TUSCAN STYLE

Here boneless strip steaks are marinated in an olive oil based rosemary crust that may normally be reserved for porterhouse. This juicy, well textured cut of meat is a popular steakhouse cut that can successfully be prepared at home.

Serves 2 - 4

For the steak

2-4 boneless strip steaks, about 1-inch thick
2-3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2-3 tablespoons fresh rosemary leaves, finely chopped
2-3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 teaspoons each coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

For the sauce, optional

4 tablespoons cold butter
1 large shallot, finely chopped
1/2 cup dry red wine
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Trim steaks of excess fat and wipe clean with paper towel. In a small bowl combine garlic, rosemary, olive oil, salt and pepper and spread over both sides of the steaks. Let marinate for at least one hour or up to several hours. If it's necessary to refrigerate the steaks, bring to room temperature before cooking.

2. Prepare coals for grilling or heat a gas grill to medium-high until you can hold your hand about 5-inches above the surface for 4-5 seconds before it becomes necessary to pull away. Allow at least 30 minutes for the grill to become properly hot. Brush surface with oil. Give the steaks another shot of coarse salt just before grilling. Using tongs, put the steaks on the grill and sear them about 4-5 minutes on one side and about 4 minutes on the other side for medium-rare. Allow steaks to rest for a few minutes before serving.

3. While the steaks grill, melt 1 tablespoon butter in a saucepan and put in the chopped shallots. Stir the shallots over medium heat about 3-4 minutes to caramelize. Add the wine, bring to a boil and reduce mixture until most of the liquid evaporates. Add the cold butter, 1/2 tablespoon at a time, stirring as the mixture emulsifies. Season sauce with salt and pepper to taste. Spoon desired amount alongside the steak and serve.

SPINACH POTATO GRATIN

With or without the steak this is a winning vegetable dish.

Serves 4

3/4 -1 pound fresh spinach
3 large russet potatoes
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
4-5 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 1/2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

1. Cut stems from the spinach right up to the leaves and discard. Soak leaves in a couple of changes of lukewarm water and drain. Pat dry with paper towels and put into a large mixing bowl. Peel potatoes and slice about 1/4-inch thick. Add to spinach with the remaining ingredients. With a large rubber spatula toss gently to mix to coat with the oil.

2. Place the contents in a shallow baking/serving dish. Bake 30-35 minutes until potatoes are tender and slightly crisp. Serve hot.

Mary Jane's Restaurant

128 North Main Street, East Hampton
631-324 8008

We walked into a restaurant that could have doubled as a welcoming living room, with the grand piano, the books leaning lazily on the shelves, the oriental rugs. My friend and I decided to wait for a table by the fire, so the hostess led us to a low wooden table in the bar area, and we settled into two comfortable armchairs as she dashed off to get us a wine list. We selected a Cabernet from the sizable menu and before we had taken two sips, our table was ready. We were led to the first room, where yet another grand piano sat, awaiting a night that Mary Jane predicted well. "Girls, you don't know what you got yourselves into," she said jokingly as she met us at the entrance to the main dining room. Her eyes were drifting towards the piano. But at that point I had little time to wonder; my stomach was starting to growl as the scent of roasted garlic wafted through the room.

We were led to a table beside the fire, and our waitress, a smiling and attentive woman named Angie, handed us menus. I looked around the room, which also possessed that cozy living room feel with the elegance of quality. Angie told us a bit about the history of Mary Jane's and the goal of the restaurant. When Mary Jane's opened as an Italian restaurant twenty-two years ago, it was called Il Monastero. There was a time in the restaurant's history that the waiters actually wore monks' robes.

The garlic bread tasted as good as it smelled, and the menu was enticing. Luckily, Angie told us we could order half-portions of four dishes instead of two full dishes. If these were half dishes, though, the entrees must be enormous. My friend and I shared the lobster ravioli and MJ's special, the mushroom ravioli. The pasta is homemade, and these little pillows were delectable.

We asked Angie what she thought we should do for the next course, and she told us one of her personal favorites, the zuppa pesca or fish soup. We went for that and a Mediterranean style grille chicken, which came with string beans and creamy risotto. The fish soup was loaded with mussels, scallops, and clams, and it was a festival of tastes. I had to move on quickly, though, because Ken, the chef, had sent us out the catch of the day. It was tilapia with mango, carrot, and chive chutney, and the fish just fell apart when I went to cut it. It was sweet and tender, perfectly done.

One of the goals of the restaurant is to offer good quality in a family setting. The dishes are available family-style, which is great for sharing and tasting everything. Since everything in the kitchen is made to order, the chef, Ken, can be very accommodating. He will prepare half-dishes or modify dishes to your liking. Ken came out to tell us a bit about himself, and an interview quickly turned into a lively conversation. He went to Johnson and Wales and then worked at a little restaurant near there. His menu at Mary Jane's is influenced by Italian, Southern, and New Orleans cuisines, and he knows there are certain things that he knows could not be taken off the menu or patrons would riot. The pot roast is a must, and while the fish changes with the seasons, the fresh catch is a staple in our beach town. When he began to talk about his work in New Orleans prior to moving here, my friend and I thought about how Angie, too, had come from New Orleans. When we questioned Angie as she brought out the key lime pie, she blushed and the restaurant romance was confirmed.

By the time we finished the key lime pie, which was a gorgeous blend of textures ranging from smooth to crispy (mmm), we were ready to burst. Mary Jane came in with a sparkle in her eyes that I could see she shared with all her customers. "Are you girls ready?" she asked, and as we followed her into the other room, we realized she was right – we had had no idea what we were in for. We walked in to the piano room where Rick McDonald was tickling the ivories, and a crowd of strangers was greeting us like old friends. We stayed all night, singing Billy Joel and Billie Holiday, dancing around with a wonderful crowd of people really living that evening and loving it. Mary Jane's is a family affair, even if you're not a member of the family! Delicious food, kind and generous people, and a warm atmosphere, all to the sound of live piano. –Emily J Weitz

Dining in the Hamptons

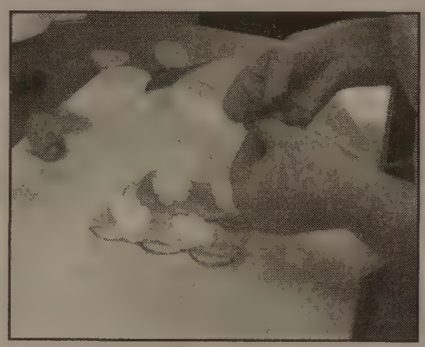
Easy Cook, Easy Clean

It's time for easy cooking. Tonight, I'm eating cold pizza, but that's not the kind of easy cooking I'm thinking about. While I was preparing this lovely meal (putting it on a napkin to take it to the couch) I realized that it doesn't have to be this way. Even on the nights when it is too much trouble to use the grill pan, much less fire up the grill, you can still have a meal that's worth eating, and avoid filling the sink with pots and pans to be scrubbed. How? Cook in a packet.

I'm sure you've seen the two ladies from Reynolds who star in TV commercials that tout the fun and ease of cooking fish and vegetables in a neatly folded rectangle of tin foil. They prove that with a bit of imagination and a few fresh herbs, anyone can make a great, healthy meal, in literally a few minutes and leave no trace in the kitchen once you've tossed the foil.

The cooking of food in packets originated in France, and it was parchment paper that was used. Part of the charm of cooking an individual serving en papillote is the dramatic and unexpected presentation at the table, especially fun if your guests don't know what's inside. Parchment paper is a thick but moldable, grease and moisture resistant product that serves many uses in cooking and baking. It can be purchased in rolls at kitchen stores, gourmet shops and even some grocery stores. To use, tear or cut off a square, then fold it in half to double the strength. Using a sharp scissor, cut along one edge in a wide semi-circular shape, starting with a pointed end and ending with a curved end – like the traditional, paper Valentine hearts cut from construction paper. Unfold it, and voila, heart-shaped parchment. Center the food you are cooking on one side, and then fold the second side over the first, and make a small fold in the edge where the two sides meet. Twirl the end to seal, and that's it. You have created a wonderful little bag of food that will steam in the oven, retaining and enhancing its moisture and natural flavors. Of course, if even this intimidates you, good old Reynolds makes tear off sheets that are already heart-shaped. What goes inside? Anything, really. Here are two great recipes.



The first one, from fabulous-food.com, is for grilled herbed mushroom packets and takes only 12-15 minutes to cook in a 400-degree oven. The mushrooms are a great accompaniment to an entrée, or atop olive oil coated, grilled toast points.

Slice one pound of mushrooms and toss in a bowl with 1 tsp. of lemon juice. Add to this 6 chopped green onions, 1 tsp. fresh chopped Italian parsley, 1/2 tsp. dried thyme, 1/2 tsp. marjoram, 1/2 tsp. crushed red pepper, 1/4 cup melted butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Divide into 4 portions, and fold into the parchment packet. Open carefully when it's finished, because hot steam will blast out.

For an entrée, try lemon-baked sea bass with spinach salad, from seasonbyseason.com. Preheat your oven to 450 degrees. Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a non-reactive bowl, and whisk in 1 tablespoon minced shallot, 2 tbsp. finely chopped Italian parsley, and 3/4 cup olive oil. Add 4 sea bass fillets, about 6 ounces each to the bowl, and allow to marinate for 10 minutes. Center the fish on one side of the parchment heart, and repeat the same step as for the above recipe. Season the fish with salt and pepper, pour on the remaining marinade and cover each fillet with a thinly sliced round of lemon. Seal the packets, place them on a baking sheet and cook for about 12 minutes until the fish is cooked through.

While this is happening, prepare the spinach salad. Soak 2 tablespoons of thinly sliced red onion slivers in the juice of one lemon for several minutes. The onions will turn a pretty pale pink. Whisk in 1/4 cup olive oil and season. Add the spinach and toss well.

To finish, remove the fish from the oven, slice open the packets and pull back the paper. Spread the spinach on the top of each fillet – it will wilt dramatically. Serve immediately.

Once you've gotten the hang of this, you will find it irresistible to experiment. If you are cooking vegetables and want to be really healthy, you can steam them plain by including a few ice cubes in the packet. This will ensure enough moisture to cook them all the way through. For a bit more flavor, add a pat of butter or a tbsp. of a good olive oil, and chopped herbs or citrus slices. If you are using ingredients with a high moisture content like tomatoes (delicious on top of fish, with olives, capers and basil leaves), or a generous amount of marinade, you might want to use aluminum foil instead. But whatever you choose, the result will be the same – an easy meal, with easy clean-up.

Dining in the Hamptons

Spice Up Your Barbecue

So it's a beautiful day and you want to spend it outside with friends. You've set up the backyard, the plantings are scattering color about the property, and the coals in the grill are glowing. The backyard barbecue never looked so good. It's not just hot dogs and hamburgers anymore. You can have that same casual, spring get together and add a little kick. Because sometimes the classic American menu craves a little more flavor.

With today's health conscious attitude, a replacement for cole slaw and other mayonnaise-drenched dishes is in high demand. A green salad is the way to go at a barbecue, and to make it interesting, add ingredients like goat cheese, apples, or even diced mangoes. But be careful putting mangoes into a salad for a large group. Some people who have never eaten them can be seriously allergic without knowing it. Put the salad in a giant bowl and let people serve themselves. My family's new favorite dressing for salads is the simplest of the simple: Squeeze a lemon and drizzle some olive oil over the green salad and you have yourself a fresh, healthy, and beautiful salad.

Another side dish that is often found at barbecues bathing in the gooey white stuff is macaroni salad. Now, I love pasta, but to me mayonnaise is the ultimate destroyer. Lighten up your pasta salad by tossing bowties with feta, olives, sun-dried tomatoes, basil, and olive oil. It's attractive to the eye, with its red, cream, black, and green colors, and it's much healthier than the soggy noodles of mayo salad. Excuse me – macaroni salad.

I am not a huge meat-eater, but I know that many people cannot replace that craving for a juicy burger when it hits. So don't eliminate burgers altogether. They're integral to a barbecue. My sister-in-law happens to be a diva in the kitchen, and she has taught me most of what I know. She likes to brush a little barbecue sauce on the burgers, like you would on a piece of steak. It adds a hint of flavor without taking away from the simplicity of a burger that you can dress up yourself.

It's also important to have options for the people who shy away from meat. Veggie burgers are healthy, and there are some delicious brands. Second Nature Market on Newtown Lane in East Hampton has a great selection of veggie burgers and other alternatives to meat.

If you decide to have your barbecue on the beach, it is essential that you pick up some seafood. But even if you are firing up the grill in your own backyard, don't forget that we are in a seafood haven. The other night we made fabulous shrimp skewers on the grill. Get some skewers, either wooden or metal. Peel some fresh shrimp and vegetables of your choice, perhaps red and yellow peppers, onions, squash, and tomatoes, and line them up on the skewer. You don't have to grill them for long. In fact, shrimp cooks so quickly you have to be careful not to overdo them. A delicious, elegant barbecued shrimp entrée is finished in minutes.

And now, ladies and gentlemen, the drinks. Sun tea is a refreshing beverage for afternoon soirees. Leave your favorite herbal tea in a pitcher out in the sun for a few hours and then throw some ice cubes in. Again, a tribute to my sister-in-law, I now like to sprinkle some fresh mint in the tea to add a nice cool kick. But my absolute favorite drink, that adds culture and kick to any old-fashioned get-together, is sangria. I am telling you, this beverage goes fast. That's why you have to make a whole big vat of it! Plus, it only gets better if it has to sit in the fridge, as the fruit soaks up the wine. Everyone has his/her own recipe for sangria. All of them include lots of cheap red wine. You can use either bourbon or vodka, but if you use vodka, you have to add sugar to keep the sweet flavor. I spent a year in one of the meccas of sangria, Barcelona. When I returned, I couldn't find a comparable sangria; and then I realized what it was. Here in the US, most restaurants that serve sangria load it up with citrus: limes, oranges, and lemons. But the thing I love most about sangria is the way other, more grainy fruits absorb the juice. Pears and apples are absolutely unbeatable.

Some things just shouldn't be changed. Whether you're trying to be casual or elegant, healthy or indulgent, budget or extravagant, we all know that watermelons are the only way to finish up a barbecue. Now stand at the edge of your deck and start the seed-spitting contest. Just because you have delectable food and creative drinks doesn't mean you have to give up the good old-fashioned fun of the classic American get-together.

GREAT FOOD IN A COMFORTABLE SETTING

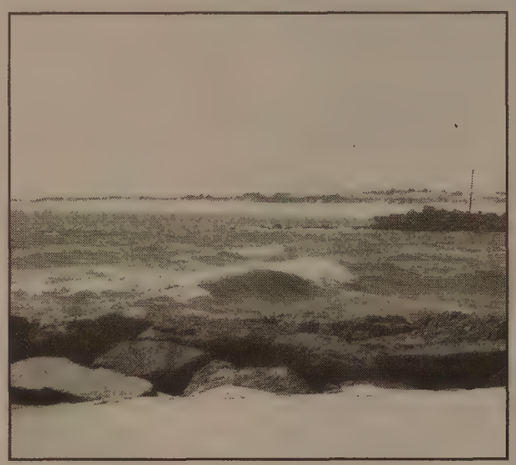
Away At School.... By David Lion Rattiner

Isn't this good?

Last weekend I came down to East Hampton from my college in Boston to visit my Dad. When you are away from East Hampton, or the Hamptons in general, you come back and notice how amazingly well everything seems to work here. The trees are ridiculously green, the beaches ridiculously beautiful, the houses are out of a dream. It truly is so disgustingly gorgeous here it can take a person's breath away. I was showing Jen, who hails from Massachusetts, all of the different sights. "Isn't this town pond neat? In the winter it freezes over and when I was a kid I'd go ice skating there. Oh, and here is Herrick Park. This is where I used to practice football when I was in grade school." We would drive some more, "This is Main Beach, isn't this great? I used to lifeguard right here all summer. It was my dream to be a lifeguard when I was a kid. Such a great job, like out of Baywatch or something. C'mon let's go, Steven Spielberg's house is down here. This street is Lily Pond Lane. When I was in driver's ed, we used to drive down this street. This section is called Georgica, the Village owns the public beaches here and the towns own the ones out into Montauk. These houses are my favorite, so nice. Ridiculously expensive but I mean, God just look at these things. Are these not the nicest houses you have ever seen?"

I drove around everywhere. We even went out to Montauk. Jen was kind of awestruck by everything. "It is so nice here," she said.

"Yeah, I know, it is important to keep it that way, too. The locals here make a real effort to keep big business out so that it stays nice. You know, Teddy Roosevelt used to be a Rough Rider and would stay at this ranch out in Montauk called Deep Hollow Ranch? It is the oldest cattle ranch in America, the owners of the place, the Levers, are really nice people. They are friends with my Dad. Oh, and I have to show you this Air Force base that is out in Montauk, along with the lighthouse. You know that song that goes when the moon hits your eye like a big pizza pie that's amore! The guy that wrote that song was stationed out here during World War II. There is all of this history to this place, you wouldn't believe it."



A view from the beach in East Hampton

After about two hours of driving around with Jen, trying to show her as much as I could, we parked in East Hampton and decided to take a walk down Main Street, arguably the most beautiful street in America. As we walked around I noticed that the ice cream parlor was taken over by Starbucks. I got a weird feeling in my stomach about this. I remembered telling Jen how the locals here do their best to keep big business out of the town and became a little pissed off about it. I never thought that I would see the day that Starbucks would be in East Hampton.

Now for those of you that read this column, you probably already know that Starbucks is kind of like this enemy of mine. I don't know why, I just feel like coffee shops should be privately owned. Tiffany's, I can handle, Coach, I can handle, but Starbucks? What's next? I can guarantee you that Starbucks, like the others, is there to stay. The only way they would leave is if somebody powerful made a big stink about it and inspired a boycott.

When I was in grade school, I can remember how annoyed I was that I had to go all the way out to the outskirts of Southampton in order to get McDonalds. I would be so excited for away baseball games growing up because I knew that on the drive home, we would get to stop there. I even remember not really understanding at all why McDonald's didn't just build a store in East Hampton. I brought this up to my Dad when I was ten years old. He then explained to me how the local governments worked to prevent these kinds of things because they wanted to keep the area unique and beautiful. I never understood this when I was little. Now that I am older, however, I get it. The rest of the world has these big companies and one of the reasons why we get so much tourism is because we don't.

I can't tell you how angry I am going to be if this continues. Some action better be taken. I don't know what I would do if Villa turned into a Burger King, or if Khahn's Surf Shop turned into a Quicksilver. Don't let these kinds of things happen anymore. I'm putting my foot down with Starbucks. East Hampton is the last place you can go. No Amagansett for you. The local stores are there to stay.

Oh, the big chain stores have come to Amagansett, too?

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

The secret is out! The Secret Closet, originally located on Jobs Lane in Southampton, has recently relocated just in time for the spring/summer 2004 season. The new dig is a refreshing addition in the lovely, quaint town of Greenport at 300 Main Street.

This summer's best looks include the newest secret for the season: feminine and sexy styles are captured in the off-the-shoulder sweaters and knits from Ana Capri and Beau and Eros. Look for lingerie inspired daywear fashions like corset-styled camisoles. From France, names like Papillon and Arianne. Skirts have lots of flourish, flirty tiers, flare, and flounce from Poleci and Hype. Bottoms that appear in every length and proportion are colorful and exciting.

The key silhouette in swimwear is the string bikini from Kiwi or Belabaum. Ponchos are definitely a "must-have" new cover-up for some of those cool summer nights.

Visit the new old Secret Closet in beautiful Greenport. This shop has it all: sun, sand and style.

For further information call the Secret Closet at 631-477-1310.

Bombay has finally landed on our doorstep. Open only a few weeks, Bombay is conveniently located at the Bridgehampton Commons on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton. The style and tone of Bombay reflects a sophisticated look featuring classic and traditional furniture, as well as coordinating accessories and wall decor. Bombay quickly migrated away from merely reproducing antiques and began designing its own proprietary home furnishings while remaining true to the roots of its traditional style. The result was a unique, fashion-focused and desirable product line. Responding to customers' requests beginning in the early 90s, Bombay expanded into larger pieces of furniture.

Vase avaiable at Bombay

In the fall of 1997, Bombay introduced an updated palm tree logo and updated store design, reminiscent of turn-of-the-century mercantile buildings. The new look is much more in keeping with today's retail environment and results in a more pleasurable shopping experience for their customers.

The shop is filled to the rafters in an exclusive, picturesque setting, with beautiful, exotic and unique home décor, garden and patio furnishings, lighting, bedding textiles, bed and bath, game room items and accessories. Wedding gifts to have and to hold are treasured for many years, holding much more meaning than any other present ever received. The wedding gift ideas are special and romantic. There are also cherished gifts for the bridesmaids and practical gifts for the groomsmen.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

With the Memorial Day holiday at our heels, summer has officially begun. There is plenty to do on the East End, and one of the favorites for visitors, tourists and weekenders, is shopping. So let's do it!

Quite a shopping extravaganza will be going on at The Merchandise Pavilion at the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club on Montauk Highway in Southampton for all shoppers on Thursday, June 10 through Sunday, June 13 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and will be in operation from Monday, June 14 through Sunday, June 20 from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. for those with tickets to the Open. There are 36,000 (air conditioned) square feet of U.S. Open-logoed merchandise that includes shirts, hats, jackets, T-shirts, lapel pins, ball markers, sweatshirts, artwork, golf balls, divot tools, towels, jewelry, children's apparel, glassware and so much more. No ticket is necessary for the shopping site and there is plenty of parking at the Southampton College right across the highway from the club. Check the website at: www.usga.org for more information.

Strolling through the village of Southampton, I stopped into Aunt Suzie's Clothes For Kids at 20 Hampton Road and found some cute items from new born to size 16. Aunt Suzie's is featuring "Life Is Good" celebration with a new line of T-shirts, baseball caps, totes, beach towels, Frisbees and accessories for infants and adults. Stop in and check it out, you will love this shop.

Stopping off at Saks Fifth Avenue on Hampton Road and Main Street in Southampton, I found an Act One Sale in progress. Wow! 40% off on a fantastic selection of women's designer clothing, ready-to-wear and sportswear, 30% to 40% off ladies handbags, 30% off ladies shoes and 25% to 40% off men's tailored clothing, designer sportswear and more.

Have you been to the Southampton Sewing Center for any of the Miele products that you favor including the Miele coffee system that delivers espresso and cappuccino, latte or regular coffee in one, two three? You should stop by the kitchen, laundry and floorcare showroom located at 67 Jobs Lane and the Floorcare Showroom on East Main Street in Riverhead for a look at all the great appliances, vacuums and laundry merchandise.

Hampton Interiors, Inc. on North Main Street in Southampton, Old Riverhead Road in Westhampton Beach and Main Road in Aquebogue is wondering if you have spring fever. The "Spring Fever Special" sale is discounting 10% to 15% on all fabrics. They are manufacturers of fine upholstered furniture and all the work is done on premises. You may need a coupon for this sale, so inquire within.

Don't miss the great gift sale that is perfect for dads, grads and brides and grooms at Patio.Com at One Montauk Highway in Southampton. Save on patio furniture, replacement cushions, umbrellas, grills, hammocks, pinball game room furniture, foosball, air hockey, bars, spectator chairs and so much more. Open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. No excuses, they are always there when you are!

If you are looking for a spring sale on custom slipcovers and draperies, Wendy's Fabrics East, located in the Water Mill Plaza opposite Baywood Nursery may have just what you need. Hunter Douglas Verticals and mini blinds are 50% off, slipcover and drapery fabrics can be purchased for only $1.00 a yard, and for $5 per yard you can take advantage of the special terrycloth close-out sale, and there is a special group of drapery and slipcover fabrics at only $4.99 a yard (full bolts). The sale has already started so get going.

OK, now is the time to shop and pick up some good deals at the Down Factory Store at The Elegant John on Montauk Highway in East Hampton. They guarantee the lowest goose down prices in the USA, which include comforters, pillows and featherbeds. The store is filled to the rafters with bed linens (high thread count) at affordable prices, hampers, shower caddies, china lamps, scales, bath and beauty accessories, towels, rugs, robes and so much more. The 800 ct. sheet sets are on sale as well as the goose down pillows. Open every day from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and from 11a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Richard and Frank will be happy to help you.

Until next week. Ciao and happy summer shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops, sales or where to find something special, please email me at: shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at 631-537-0500. I would love to hear from you...

GET ME TO THE CHURCH ON TIME

I just passed a big milestone in my life. I was just baptized and it was both scary and exciting. There I was being put on a pedestal at St. Mark's Church in Westhampton Beach with all these big people dressed in white around me and then all the members of the congregation turned to face me. Whoa – what's going on here? I admit that I cried and even let out a few shrieks but soon it was over and I was a member of the faith. I blew out my first candle of the day. Then the service ended and people came over to congratulate mom and dad and me. Whew. Then people came over to my godmother Pam Sheiffer's house on Oneck Lane for a party. Now I could relax and eat. Lots of friends and family were there and the kids got to play in the big backyard while the parents and other adults schmoozed (a big Hamptons activity). After lunch, they brought out a gigantic cake that said "Congratulations Emily" and I got to blow out candles again and eat the first slice (not my only slice). I want to thank my family, my godmothers host Pam Sheiffer and CBS's Cindy Hsu, godparents the Richards who came up from Florida, godfathers Dan Rattiner and Robert Zimmerman, and Auntie Lee Fryd who did the photos. Sounds like an acceptance speech. They say there are few memories of three years old but I know I will remember this day.

We just got the scoop on a great new kid-friendly event. Hang out with TV and film stars and my mom Katlean de Monchy at the Annual Drama Dept Company Picnic at the home of Heide Banks and Howard Lazar on Dune Road in Bridgehampton on Sunday July 25. For the parents: Isaac Mizrahi, Patricia Clarkson's Mint Juleps (no not for us kids), Cynthia Nixon and her Tomato Surprise, Billy Crudup and his famed baked beans, Edie Falco without Tony, Marisa Tomei and others who will mix and mingle. Drama Dept Picnic is a kid-friendly event with world class magicians doing a show and then teaching us kids how to do the magic tricks. For more info call 212-633-9108

On events for kids: Dan's is Number One in the Hamptons and we want to be Number One with kids too! So let's start the wave by sending me your invites, parties, activities, charity events and comments.

Send via email to my dad and agent david@nextpert.com or send hard copies to Emily – East End Kid c/o Dan's Papers

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Garage sales in the Hamptons are unlike those elsewhere in America, perhaps with the exception of Beverly Hills. Having been to many, I usually look for old car books and automobilia. At one I found a vintage set of auxiliary driving lights, circa 1960, which fit perfectly, mounted on the front bumper of my old Alfa coupe. At another I was drawn to a ten foot wooden skiff which came with an antique ten horsepower Mercury outboard. The price was right at $150. That little leaky putt-putt gave me and my son a summer of fun. Once, in Remsenburg, I came upon a mint vintage Porsche owned by a well known celebrity, but alas, it was not for sale.

Just recently, at a garage sale, I chanced upon some yellowed automobile magazines dating from the seventies. Mixed in among them I found a most interesting catalog published in 1972. It was the Nemet Auto International catalog of cars for sale in Europe at factory prices, all of which could be bought overseas and then shipped here to the United States. What fascinated me were the prices of the cars as well as the accessories.

In 1972 you could purchase a Volkswagen Beetle in Germany for $1,809.50. Fifty cents?

The convertible was $2,372. There were some other minor charges like a document fee of $5.50, but what caught my eye was the unusually low shipping cost to the United States of $93. There were very few accessories offered. The most unusual was an air conditioning option at $345. This fascinated me because I had never seen an air conditioning unit on a Volkswagen Beetle, nor did I know one was ever offered by the factory. I hope that it cooled better than the Beetle's heater warmed.

Porsche was well documented. A 1972 Porsche 911T, their base model, cost $7,033. The top of the line 911S listed for $8,778. By the way, the 1972 911S is now considered one of the most desirable of the early six cylinder Porsches, and is worth up to $40,000. Porsche had one of the largest options lists in the book. I counted sixty-eight! Odd options like a raised front seat, left or right, at $10.50, or a raised steering wheel at $24 were offered. They also had an auxiliary gasoline heater for $208, another item which is as rare as hen's teeth. The Porsche cost seven dollars more to ship to the United States than the Volkswagen, at $100.

1972 Mercedes

Mercedes Benz was always popular as a car that could be purchased in Europe and shipped to the US. The base 1972 220 sedan could be had for $4,689. The top of the line 300SEL 4.5 was pricey at $10,560. What is really an eye opener is that the small wheelbase 600 cost $30,048 in America and sold for $19,983 in Europe. The Grosser Mercedes 600 limousine sold for $34,547 here and could be had for $22,311 when bought in Europe and transported here. With a savings of over $10,000 per vehicle, logic said to buy these flagships over there. Mercedes had a seat fetish in those days. Options included height adjustable, factory lowered or orthopedic. They also offered a reinforced spring frame for five dollars each seat. That is interesting because all Mercedes of that period had a reputation for their seats simply collapsing with age.

Another luxury car of the era was Jaguar. An XK-E twelve cylinder convertible listed for $6,400. The XJ 6 sedan was the same price. Most interesting is that Jaguar offered only six options, quite different from Porsches sixty-eight choices.

There were many other documented prices of very interesting automobiles. A BMW 2002, the car that put BMW on the map, cost $3,205. I owned one when new and consider it to be one of the greatest entry level cars ever built. A Fiat 124 coupe and spyder cost $3,005, and $3,264 repectively. They both were and still are beautiful automobiles.

The 1972 MGB roadster, one of the greatest selling sports cars of all time, could be had for $2,800. The tiny MG Midget sold for $2,112, just slightly more than a Volkswagen. The detachable hardtop for the MGB listed for $156, a very good deal.

Even Lotus and Land Rover were represented. A '72 Europa Twin Cam was $4,200 and a basic Land Rover listed for $3,300 The Land Rover had unique options like a tropical double roof for $28 and a speedometer for $4. The Land Rover had a two year 24,000-mile warranty and the Lotus offered only a six month warranty. Hmmm.

As a police officer once remarked to me as he showed me my speed on his radar gun readout, "Read it and weep." The same can be said about these 1972 car prices. Inflation is great for long term Hamptons home owners, but it sure makes it tough for car enthusiasts to buy the car of their dreams today.

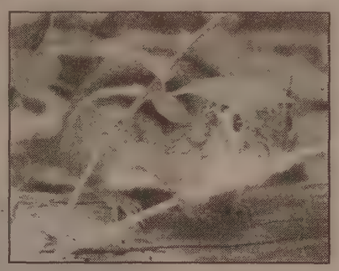
Over the River and Through the Woods with Ken Kindler

Explore at the wildlife refuge

You wake up on a lovely summer day and want to treat your family to a delightful experience with nature, but you didn't plan anything in advance. Where to go with the kids for a spontaneous adventure when you want to spend a lovely day outside? Have you ever been to the Elizabeth A. Morton Wildlife Refuge in Noyac? If you answered no, you and your family are in for a delightful discovery! This land (187 acres) was donated to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in 1954 by Mrs. Elizabeth Morton Tilton and is a tranquil place with easy-to-follow trails..

After the long drive, you will appreciate the restroom facilities, chipmunks, chickadees, woods and the Peconic Bay. You will want to bring along some sunflower seeds. Be certain the seeds are unsalted. Salt will harm the birds. As you walk along the 1.5-mile nature trail, remember to walk slowly and quietly and to listen for the chickadees. They will call you, "cheet, twit, cheet, twit" as they implore, "we're hungry." Hold a few sunflower seeds out in your palms and wait for the chickadees to land on your fingers and grab the seeds. You have to remain very still for a while and hold your hands out away from your body. If by chance they're not feeding during your visit, please don't leave the seeds on the trail; this will attract rats, and will also thwart other visitors' attempts at hand feeding.

The trail is easy to follow. It offers great opportunities for bird watching, photography, environmental education, and surfcasting should you decide to walk to the beach. Be sure to bring your binoculars, for observing the wildlife and for the beautiful views that you will see once you hike out onto the beach. The trails visit ponds, a salt marsh lagoon, and grasslands. When you complete the loop trail, you can follow the trail to the beach. From September through March you may enjoy a tranquil 1.75 mile walk out along Jessup's Neck. Once out on the Neck you have a beautiful view of the North Fork, Shelter Island, North Haven and Robin's Island. Be aware, from April through August much of this beach is closed to the public in order to protect endangered and threatened species, such as piping plovers, least and roseate terns, peregrine falcons, and osprey, who use it for nesting and brood rearing. A viewing platform was recently completed near the entrance to the beach. From this vantage point you can unobtrusively observe these endangered animals.



Each year this trail becomes closer to being fully wheelchair and stroller accessible. This is a goal to which the National Wildlife Refuge is committed. The restrooms, information kiosks, bicycle racks, benches, excellent bridges, well-maintained parking lot and the ready means of obtaining permits make this an enjoyable place to visit. On your way back to the parking lot, stop and enjoy a snack at one of the benches. Please observe the "leave no trace" policy. Whatever you bring into the Refuge with you, you must also take out.

Directions to the Elizabeth A. Morton National Wildlife Refuge: From County Road 39, head east past Southampton College, bear left onto North Sea Road. Follow the sign for Route 52, Sag Harbor and North Sea. After traveling 2.4 miles, bear right by a small sign on the right side of the road that reads Morton NWR 5 miles. You are now on Noyac Road (also known as Route 38 and/or Noyack Road). In exactly 5 miles, you will see the entrance to the Morton NWR on the left side of the road.

The Morton NWR in Noyac is open from 1/2 hour before sunrise to 1/2 hour after sunset. For more information call the Long Island NWR Complex (631) 286-0485. A daily pass for a car is $4; for a pedestrian or bicyclist it's $2 (a bike rack is furnished at the entrance). An annual pass is available for only $12.00. Fee envelopes (and a collection receptacle in which to deposit them) are provided at the Refuge entrance. The National Wildlife Refuge appreciates and depends upon your voluntary cooperation.

Ken Kindler is a Trails and Open Space Advocate working to help the trails groups and land managers care for our "Natural Island". If you would you like to learn more about the trails or help care for them, visit the Hiking Long Island website at www.hike-li.org

Health, Beauty & Fitness

Clippity Clop with Ali Spencer

Horses are really not like people. They have four legs, we have two. They sleep standing up, we prefer to lie down. But from a medical standpoint, horses today have a lot in common with humans in terms of the treatments available to them. I recently sat down with Dr. James Meyer, DVM, ACVIM, a veterinarian practicing on both the North and South Forks, to discuss advancements in equine medicine and the ways in which treatments developed for humans are now being used to help horses as well.

Horses' life spans are lengthening.

Over the last century, the role of horses on the East End, as in all of society, has changed dramatically. Animals that were once beasts of burden are more often than not kept as companion animals. Owners want their horses around well into old age (which could be 30 years), and companies understand that there is a market for products aimed at doing just that. There are special feeds formulated especially for senior horses, with added vitamins and minerals that they might be lacking (think Ensure or Centrum Silver). And there is a new field of veterinary medicine, which specializes in the geriatric horse. This specialty studies changes and differences in the older horse and aims to improve the quality of life for horses that are living longer and longer lives.

Horses have hospitals, too.

Mostly found at universities such as Tufts and Cornell, equine hospitals are equipped to handle difficult surgery and the subsequent rehabilitation that horses must go through. Equine hospitals have ultra sound machines, digital X-ray machines and even MRIs. Surgeries are performed on broken legs and torn tendons and ligaments. One of the most fascinating and complicated surgeries is for colic. Colic is not a disease in itself but rather a word used to describe a symptom, namely abdominal pain. In a worst-case scenario, a horse's intestine (which, if unraveled would measure the length of a football field) will get tangled up within itself. If left untreated this could cause the stomach to rupture. In preparation for colic surgery, a horse must be fully anesthetized, hoisted up by his legs using a system of hydraulics and placed on the operating table.

Horses need to watch their diet and get plenty of exercise.

A proper diet is crucial to the health of the horse. If a horse is allowed to eat too many carbohydrates, such as grain and grass, and gain too much weight, he can develop a condition called Laminitis, which is essentially a breaking down of the hoof. And for an animal that lives on his feet, this is devastating. Furthermore, it is essential for a horse to drink a lot of water to aid in the digestion process. If a horse is not properly hydrated, his food might have a hard time breaking down, which could result in colic. Being overweight can put unneeded stress on a horse's joints and muscles, especially during strenuous activities like galloping or jumping. Getting regular exercise will not only keep a horse emotionally happy, but will also help him stay fit and agile well into old age.

Look Ma, no cavities!

Horses also have to visit the dentist. Or, more likely, the dentist will come and visit them. Either way, a horse's teeth should be "floated" or filed down (like our nails) at least once a year. Over time, a horse's teeth can become misshapen and pointy, making it impossible for him to chew his food properly. This puts him at serious risk for colic. Since a horse is unable to regurgitate, it is essential that his food is broken down properly and able to pass easily through the intestines. Making sure a horse's teeth are kept in good shape is one simple way to avoid serious gastro-intestinal complications.

No one is shocked anymore at the lengths people will go to keep their dogs and cats healthy. There is an entire aisle in the grocery store devoted to pet foods of all kinds – low fat, puppy formula, senior

Illuminations by Barbara Jo Howard

Tattoos Not Your Father's Icon Anymore.

It used to be that tattoos were relegated to men as symbols of passage, a permanent badge inked under the influence of camaraderie or alcohol or both. Boys would go off to war and come home emblazoned with deep blue insignias, proof of their allegiance to those with whom they served. Others bore the name of a loved one, whether it was Mom or the girl next door.

Today that girl is bound to have a tattoo of her own. Walk into any studio and you will see fresh-faced co-eds, mothers, and even grandmas, getting penned along with the core-base biker-dudes, for whom tattoos have always been a descriptive art form. Not surprisingly, the 2003 Harris Poll reports that 36% of Americans between 25-29 have one to three tattoos.

Tattoos date back to 4000 B.C., when skin markings were probably made as a curative effort. The Egyptians punctured the skin and inserted ink to make magical symbols. The craft grew throughout Asia and was elevated by the Japanese "Horis" who used it for decorative, rather than medicinal, purposes. Under the influence of the Chinese, tattoos were used to identify people who had committed a crime.

According to AskMen.com, the word is derived from the Tahitian "tattau" meaning "to mark." In the 1700s, European explorers became enamored with the Polynesian and American Indians who covered their bodies. Herman Melville wrote of the "prickers" who gave tattoos to the men on board whaling ships.

Nowadays, just about everyone who waltzes down the red carpet is bound to have a tattoo or two. Sarah Michele Gellar, Drew Barrymore and Pamela Anderson are just a few so adorned, according to tattoo.com.

Tattoos are so much in vogue that I called three studios on Long Island hoping to interview an artist. All were jam-packed, and couldn't speak until after my deadline. So I scanned the Internet and spoke with a friend.

Candice Monte, fitness director at Gurney's Spa and Resort in Montauk, sports a delicate star design on the inside of her right ankle. It matches one on her daughter's lower back.

"I knew Joselle was determined to get a tattoo," says Candice, "so I was equally determined that she should go to a place that was clean, licensed and used individual sets of sterilized needles."

Candice entered the studio having no intention of getting a tattoo. Rather, she wanted to ensure that Joselle's choice would be as discreet as possible.

"I told her, think of yourself on your wedding day in a gorgeous gown...you don't want some huge tattoo on your shoulder to ruin the look," she confided.

It was Joselle's idea that they should get matching tattoos to celebrate their relationship. The final result is a feminine and pretty tribute.

If you, or your teen, are thinking about a tattoo, check out About.com's Tattoo Safety Checklist. Be sure the studio is licensed and inspected by the Health Department. An autoclave should be on-site to sterilize needles at no less that 245 degrees Fahrenheit for at least thirty minutes. All artists should be wearing gloves, and have examples of their work.

The most popular design is Chinese iconography. Yet, some artists are truly gifted. About.com shows a tattoo of a yellow swallowtail butterfly that is so realistic it looks as if the wings will flutter.

Not interested in any body decor? Imagine never applying make-up again. Some tattoo artists specialize in permanent eyebrow color, liner and lipstick.

The big question is "does getting a tattoo hurt"? It will sting if the tattoo is near the bone; however, the process barely tingles if placed on a fleshy part of the body (which is why so many men opt for their arms).

Despite the popularity, getting a tattoo is serious business. Hygiene is paramount during and following the procedure. Get references, see work; visit studios before making your final decision. Also, select a design that you can live with, because removal is painful and costly. Remember Angelina Jolie's proclamation of eternal love for Billy Bob Thornton? A stick-on would have lasted longer. So, as they say on Suite101.com: "Think before you ink."

Natural Medicine Including Natural Hormones

Before getting into what I would like you to know about natural hormones, let me give you some idea of what naturopathic medicine is all about. As I sit here in the Port Jefferson Library typing this article, I am reminded of when I came to this very same library fourteen years ago. It was a very different time in my life.

At that time I had been struggling for several years with a diagnosis of ulcerative colitis that was a matter of great unpleasantness, pain and suffering for me. In spite of my best efforts to find a cure through conventional methods, nothing was working. The reality for me was that I was getting worse. So in 1990 I found myself at this very same library, hoping to find an answer.

The answer for me came when I typed in two search phrases in the library articles database. Long before I had ever heard the phrase I typed in two words. I typed alternative, because I knew that the conventional approach was not working for me, and I typed in medicine because I knew that I was sick and needed medicine.

My "alternative medicine" search brought up an article about naturopathic physicians. It explained that naturopathic doctors (NDs) attended a four-year medical school that taught both conventional (modern, Western) medicine and natural (herbal, nutritional, homeopathic) medicine.

I was so excited to see a naturopathic doctor because I knew at least I would get a different perspective. It is not about right or wrong, good or bad, it is simply a matter of a different way of looking at the same problem. For me it was a different way of looking at the maze of disease that I found myself trapped in. I wasn't looking for a miracle, just an alternative perspective.

I wanted you to understand my story so that you would understand that for NDs like us (my wife Roseanne is an ND with her own story of healing with naturopathic medicine), naturopathic medicine is not a business, or a practice; it is most accurately described as a calling. The gift of our calling is that we get to give a different perspective to people that may have been suffering for years with their problem. And most exciting, sometimes approaching the condition with that different perspective creates what look like miracles in a person's health and life.

That different perspective is what brings us to today's topic. I remember in 1996 Roseanne and I were giving talks about the advantages of natural hormones (bioidentical hormones) as opposed to synthetic hormones (Premarin aka pregnant mares' urine and provera). Two questions would come up. Where are the studies about natural hormones and what is the proof that synthetic hormones are not good? For us, the proof of the dangers of synthetic hormones was evident every day in our practice. Consistently, almost without fail, the breast cancer patients that came to us would have a history of synthetic hormone use. That is what we could communicate at the talks, as well as the fact that it simply makes sense to replace any chemical in the body, if it needs replacement, with the identical chemical (hormone) and not a different one.

Now, years later (too late for some) the studies are proving exactly that. Most people know that the major hormone studies with synthetic hormones needed to be discontinued due to the obvious and greatly increased risk of many diseases with their use.

Another more complex question that would come up during the talks was if natural hormone replacement was indeed "natural." Even if we used something identical to the human hormone, was it natural to do this? We look at the body for that answer. When we see symptoms, we know that the body telling us that something needs to change, something is wrong, something is needed. When women were placed on the appropriate therapies and we saw a reversal of osteoporosis, elimination of hot flashes, elimination of anxiety and palpitations, then we had a pretty good idea we were going in the right direction.

Native cultures in other parts of the world consume approximately 10,000 times the concentration of plant hormones as we do in our culture, with our most unnatural of diets. What we have concluded through our observation is that in these cultures, the hormonal glands (thyroid, adrenal, ovaries or testicles) function more to regulate the hormones that are already there. In our culture we change these glands into producers, and the resulting signs of hormonal exhaustion are everywhere. The weight gain around the middles of men and women, thinning and dry skin, osteoporosis (again, in men and women), fatigue, the use of anti-anxiety and anti-depressive medicines and other drugs to suppress symptoms that are really a result of hormone deficiency.

So the best natural medicine that we have at this time for you is to create abundant health in your future, get accurate hormone testing and get on the right natural hormone supplements for you so you can live in your natural health and beauty.

Hot New Non-Surgical Facelift Is Done By Top Expert

For the first time ever, women and men seeking a more youthful appearance have the option of an aesthetic procedure that does not require invasive surgery, chemicals, needles or lasers. Thermage Tissue Tightening Procedure™ (ThermaLift) is an FDA-approved, non-invasive treatment that tightens tissue without surgery and can be done year round without any limitation to sun exposure.

Dr. Alexander Covey, a Board-Certified Cosmetic Surgeon and Director of East End Laser Care, has a flourishing cosmetic practice in Southampton, Center Moriches, and New York City. He is a leading authority in this ThermaLift Procedure (non-surgical facelift/browlift) and has been awarded an advanced certification from Thermage for providing the highest level of expertise in the treatment and education of ThermaLift.

ThermaLift is one of the latest FDA-approved non-invasive procedures for maintaining a youthful appearance. It is not a laser. It works by heating the deeper tissues of the skin using a form of radio frequency (RF) energy to cause a gradual tightening of the skin without surgery. Facial and neck skin can be tightened, providing a non-surgical browlift or facelift effect.

This non-invasive alternative to facelift surgery can provide a tightening effect for people who do not want surgery. You can also target areas that are still loose after a facelift. Different areas of the face can be targeted, providing a vector of tightening. For example, treatment of the forehead provides a mild lifting of the eyebrows. Treatment of the cheeks can improve the smile folds and jowls. This tightening effect is also being used to firm up loose or sagging tissues on other parts of the body such as the abdomen, arms, buttocks, and loose skin after liposuction.

"The prospect of treating sagging skin and wrinkles without incisions or downtime appeals to my patients who do not want a surgical facelift," says Dr. Covey. Dr. Covey's patients look years younger, less tired, and feel more confident after having the Thermage treatment.

Matthew Ryan, a 46-year-old real estate agent from Bridgehampton, N.Y., was unhappy with his droopy eyelids and wrinkled brows. "Immediately after the Thermage treatment for a browlift, my friends complimented me on how my eyes looked bigger and brighter. It was thrilling not to undergo anesthesia."

Carol Reina, a 49-year-old Warranty Administrator from Shirley, N.Y., wanted a facelift but not the discomfort or downtime. "My eyes were getting smaller and my eyelids were drooping. After my full face Thermage treatment, I feel like I had a real facelift without the surgery. I was thrilled to see the immediate results and my boyfriend was able to notice an amazing difference in less than 24 hours!"

Anne Siringo, a 49-year-old bookkeeper from Bohemia, N.Y., had a New Year's goal to turn back the clock and look younger. "Previously, I had laser wrinkle reduction treatments with Dr. Covey to reduce my fine lines. I then wanted to lift my sagging jowls and neck, so I had the Thermage treatment and noticed an immediate tightening in my jowls and neck."

A single in-office treatment takes about an hour or less, and patients can return to their regular routine immediately following treatment. In some individuals, initial tightening may be evident within the first few weeks. Long-term improvement generally occurs within two to six months.

Since the ThermaLift procedure works by tightening deeper tissue, it can also complement other procedures performed by Dr. Covey that treat the upper layers of the skin such as Laser Wrinkle Reduction, Restylane Injections and Microdermabrasion.

Dr. Covey accommodates his patients, who have flown in from all over the country, by offering them personalized limo service and information on local hotel accommodations.

Dr. Alexander Covey has been recently cited by Castle Connolly's 2004 Guide as one of the "Top Doctors in the New York Metro Area." He is Board-Certified in Cosmetic Laser Surgery by the American Board of Laser Surgery. He is also a fellow of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery and a member of the American Society for Dermatologic Surgery. To schedule a complimentary consultation at East End Laser Care in Southampton, Center Moriches or New York City, please call 631-878-9200, and see photos of patients on our website at www.eastendlasercare.com.

The Anti-Aging Prescription: Strength Training

Throughout the health and fitness boom of the past 15-20 years, the American public has been introduced to a plethora of fitness fads. In the seventies, running was the new exercise nirvana. One didn't have to travel far to see someone in a matching jogging suit and sneakers pounding the pavement in a dash to better health. The early 80s saw the aerobic movement. Suddenly we saw women (and some men) in matching pastel combo leotards and fuzzy leggings jumping and stretching to Olivia Newton Johns "Let's Get Physical". This gave birth to aerobic subtitles such as "high impact" and "low impact" aerobics. The 90s saw "step" aerobics (a middle ground from the "impact" of the former two)."Tae-Bo" – the neophyte's cardiovascular introduction to martial arts moves, witnessed people pretending to be Steven Seagal, throwing kicks and punches to the pulsing beat of R&B music. The millennium arrived and "Spinning" was in. The act of pedaling a bike in a stationary position to the point of cardiac arrhythmia while an instructor with a headset microphone barked orders like a drill instructor in basic was born. People paid money to ride a bike that went nowhere!? Pilates, a meditative stretching and toning exercise which had the client attached to a Cryotron, a sort of 20th century "rack," also found an audience. At present, Yoga has seen a resurgence in popularity.

While some of these methods have merit, others should be very readily ignored. There is one exercise protocol, however, that has stayed the course throughout the history of physical fitness: strength or "resistance" training.

While weight training itself has seen its share of trends in the Universal machines of the 60s, Nautilus of the 70s, etc... The act of training your muscle with progressive and varied resistance has remained a tried and true tactic.

Within the last two years, both the American Medical Association and the National Center for Disease Control have run studies that arrive at this conclusion: Weight training is to be recognized as the primary exercise of choice because the resulting benefit list is the most extensive.

The research concludes that weight training has a remarkable effect on slowing the physiological aging clock.

Muscle and connective tissue are your body's supporting structure. As you age your support structure deteriorates unless it is given a regular stimuli to keep it activated. When your support structure deteriorates, your infrastructure (bones and cartilage) become more prone to injury. Arthritis, bursitis and osteoporosis will often result.

Tufts University recently completed a strength training program with older men and women with moderate to severe knee osteoarthritis. The results of this 16-week program showed that strength training decreased pain by 43%, increased muscle strength and general physical vitality, improved the clinical signs of the disease and decreased disability. The effectiveness of strength training to ease the pain of osteoarthritis was a potent, if not more potent prescription than medications! Similar effects of weight training have also been seen in patients with rheumatoid arthritis.

formula. This same trend is making its way into the equine world. Although they can't snuggle with you on the couch, for many people horses are part of the family, and as such deserve the best. They work incredibly hard for us (and, in some cases, win many blue ribbons for us), so it's only right that we return the favor by making their lives as comfortable as possible.

The studies also revealed that strength training is integral to the restoration of balance and the reduction of falls. As people age, balance, flexibility, slower reaction time and coordination contribute to falls and broken bones. Often these fractures can result in longer and more severe disability than in younger people. Strengthening exercises, when done properly, and through the full range of motion, increase a person's flexibility and balance, decreasing the likelihood and severity of accidental falls.

Strength training is also crucial to weight control. Individuals who have more muscle density have a significantly higher metabolic rate. Muscle is a furnace. It is active tissue that consumes calories for maintenance while stored fat uses virtually no energy. Strength training can provide up to a 20% increase in a person's metabolic rate, which is an absolute necessity for long term weight control.

Strength training and the lifestyle change it imparts have shown to have a profound impact on helping older adults manage their diabetes. Strength training combined with proper diet have marked effect on glucose control and, in many cases, eliminated the need for medication. Additionally, the volunteers in the studies were stronger, more muscular, lost body fat, had less depressive episodes and felt much more vital in their everyday lives.

The American Heart Association has joined other national health and medical groups in recommending strength training as a required step in the reduction of heart disease, and as therapy for patients in cardiac rehab.

So, gone are the days when we believed that weight training was merely some strange obsession of vanity driven narcissists. Nor is it the exclusive off season conditioning requirement for competitive athletes. Today strength training is found to be highly beneficial to all.

The medical community now holds in high esteem what athletic coaches and fitness professionals have known for years; strength training is sound preventive medicine.

My First Organic Garden

At some point buying groceries in the organic section of King Kullen starts to feel a little hollow. The food might be organic, but the transport of it jeopardizes the organic integrity through cross contaminations (possibly toxic packaging, improperly covered materials in transport, exhaust, not to mention all the fossil fuels burned when it ships). While buying organics is better than the other stuff, eventually, if you're serious about organics, you have to put up or shut up.

The plan was to convert the garden that my uncle and aunt had paid a non-organic gardener to plant for the past four years to an organic garden. Having read Cradle to Cradle and Fast Food Nation along with Silent Spring, I began to ask myself: how can I really become an organic person? The answer is to plant this garden, to watch it happen, to start thinking organic when I wake up and when I get home from work.

I enlisted my friend Silas, who herein will be addressed as my "Organic Coach," to guide me in the ways of planting an organic vegetable garden and we got started. "First," Organic Coach said, "You have to look over the books, Let's Get Growing and The Rodale's Encyclopedia of Organic Gardening. Then we can get started." Organics is a foreign language to an ex-city guy, double digging, rototilling, composting, amending the soil, detoxification, and soil-tests. It gets so involved that I ended up losing two days, missing my editorial meeting, and getting a sunburn, but not really losing days, gaining two days of sublime focus.

We started with a weed-infested, scorched, nutrient-hungry, rocky piece of earth. "We're going to need some compost," said my Organic Coach.

"Like what, five bags? Two-hundred and fifty pounds or so?"

"No, we'll need more like two pickup truck loads of the stuff." (Types of compost we used: Superlite Compost, which is fluffier compost, composted manure and composted worm castings. The more diverse ingredients to compost the better the garden.)

"Okay, and that'll do the job?"

"Well, to start. We'll lay the compost over the field and then rototill it real quick. Then we'll need Microtrol, Organic Pelletized slow release fertilizer, Earth's Fortune, Kelp Meal, and then later on we'll need some Kelp Plus."

With a spinning head, I headed over to the nursery to pick up supplies. Not plants, nope, that would come four days later, the first day was only compost and the above list. Planting came on Sunday, this was Thursday. So we rented a rototiller and began spreading compost over the garden-to-be. With compost spread we rototilled the entire area, then rototilled it again, and then rototilled it again. Then we headed back to the nursery for more compost, Kelp Meal and pelletized fertilizer that contains calcium and iron along with other nutrients that slowly releases into the soil, and Microtrol, which breaks down petroleum byproducts that are left over from chemical fertilizer. We spread all these materials and then rototilled the entire garden again until it looked fluffy as a pillow.

Then the double digging began. Double digging is a method an organic gardener uses to raise the beds that the vegetables are planted in. This method has the beds raised up higher than the pathways through the garden and the gardener never steps on those beds leaving it to touch only organic material. Double digging has us moving dirt across the beds until we have elevated the entire bed about a foot above the path.

"A garden is a personal thing. How do you want it shaped?" said the Organic Coach.

This took a while, a lot of discussing and hand gesturing, but eventually I decided on one triangular bed and two waves. I love to surf and wave shaped beds seemed like the most organic I could be. After double digging the beds we sprayed the Microtrol, mixed with water. By then it was pitch black out.

On Sunday we purchased all the vegetable plants and seeds, all organic: six varieties of tomatoes, beets, cucumbers, peppers (I will make my own organic hot sauce), beans, peas, edamame, eggplant, lettuce, cucumber, radicchio, zucchini, nasturtiums, marigolds, violas, Swiss chard, Pak Choy, and an Asian salad mix which I will sow later to stagger my

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Pseudo-succulent Sedum

In June, we are already planning for flowers to enhance the garden during the lull that occurs mid-August through September – that time when gardens transform their colors from summer whites, reds, and blues to more autumn-like yellows and rusts. It is not too early to plan for this transition and to sustain summer colors as long as possible.

Over the years, we have found that sedum is an excellent choice of perennial for gardens because it is easy and resilient, and provides beautiful foliage in colors from lime green, blue-gray, bronze, and purple-gray. The plants present wonderful, cushion-like flowers in a variety of colors from pink, through red and rose, to white, purple and even orange. As with other plants that produce tightly-linked flower heads, the flowers attract bees and butterflies.

Sedums are part of a large genus of hardy and tender succulents that include annuals and perennials, all grouped under the name "Crassulaceae." There are about 120 different species in this genus of plants. From a gardener's perspective, the perennials are the only plants with any significance. Related to succulents, the plants have thick, waxy leaves, and require little water to survive. They come in a wide array of foliages, flower colors, and growth habits ranging from tiny mat-forming plants to plants as tall as about two feet. They are found in most garden locations in the United States from zones four or greater.

Sedums are an excellent choice for edging rock gardens, on slopes, planted among stepping stones, in containers, and in flower border. The plants do best in fertile, well-drained soil that provides plenty of moisture and full sun during the summer. While these conditions are best, we have found the plants survive well and produce adequate flowers even in partly-shaded locations that are somewhat dry.

While sedum can be grown from seeds, we believe it is best to start with nursery-grown stock. (Marder's is probably the best source in the Hamptons.) Division or cuttings will easily propagate plants thereafter, so purchasing plants provides a good starting place for expansion over time.

Some of the best varieties to look for include: 'Ruby Glow' (12-18 inches tall) – a form with purple-grey leaves and tiny, ruby-red flowers from August through September; 'Autumn Joy' (2 feet tall) – forms clumps of fleshy-green leaves and large flat heads of rose-pink flowers from July through August; 'Stardust' (15-18 inches tall) – produces clumps with gray-green foliage and creamy white flowers beginning in August; 'Variegatum' (14 inches tall) – produces variegated green/white foliage with pink flowers in July and August; and 'Indian Chief' (15 inches tall) – bronze foliage with copper red flowers in late August through September. To plant sedums, dig a hole that is somewhat deeper and wider than the container. Add some peat moss or compost to the excavated soil to increase the lightness and friability of the soil. Put a little of the enhanced soil at the bottom of the hole and place the plant so it is level with its surroundings. Back fill the hole with the remaining enriched soil. Water the plant well.

Sedum usually takes less than a season to establish itself. Cuttings can be taken the following spring as the plant starts to grow. We have found that cuttings root readily when placed in moist soil in a sunny location.

Few insect, bacterial, or fungal pests attack sedum so the plants are relatively easy to cultivate and maintain. They seem to tolerate abuse provided they have occasional water. In some instances, where the plants are grown in semi-shady conditions, they may need to be staked to prevent them from flopping over (the plants tend to get leggy in shady conditions).

We believe sedum is a worthwhile garden perennial both for its succulent foliage and late-summer flowers. Because it is so easy to grow, it is a welcome garden addition on the East End.

The Pain Of Working At Home

Sitting in front of my computer in my home office, I am experiencing pain in my wrists, back and neck. I am squinting from the glare on my computer screen, and trying very hard to balance my notes for this article on the edge of my cluttered desk. There is a little room for the glass of Coke I am drinking, as long as I don't use the mouse pad to roll the mouse, and instead use it as a coaster. What is wrong with this picture?

If you guessed everything, you are correct. There is no reason why I should be this uncomfortable in this space, where I spend so much of my time. But I never set up the office properly, and it is not what it should be. Maybe this has to do with the fact that the space alternates between workspace and guest room, as so many home offices do – perhaps that is unmotivating. After all, it is much easier to prettily decorate a guest room, with mellow lighting, candles on the nightstands and a soft rug on the floor. But those elements, in the other half of the room, do nothing to help me get my writing done.

The trend towards creating a designated home office space is continuing to grow. More and more people are starting their own businesses these days, and those still in traditional employment work longer hours, nights and weekends to stay on top. There are those who telecommute, part or full time, and those lucky Hamptonites who can work from their summer homes, temporarily for a few months.

Whatever the situation, there is work to be done, and it is rarely being done on a laptop on the kitchen table. Accessible, cool furniture from stores, catalog companies and websites make decorating your home office fun and easy.

Now that I have decided to go for it, my very first change will be the chair I am sitting on. It is the wrong height, and causes many more physical problems that it solves – I would be better off standing and hunching over (it seems sometimes). When I sit on a pillow on the chair, I am almost at the right height, and my impending carpal tunnel syndrome is held at bay. I also crane my neck less and the sharp pain between my shoulder blades eases up. Good office chairs, with adjustable lift and lower mechanisms, properly cushioned seats, ergonomically safe back support, with or without arms, can cost a few hundred dollars or a few thousand. I even saw one recently for sale in Office Max, for $129. The floor model looked perfect, and of course, it was out of stock. But there are tons of websites and catalogs for office furniture, and many mega-stores, like Costco, sell a wide variety. For sleek, modern and fabulous chairs, check out dwr.com (Design Within Reach). It is worth the search and the investment.

Next, I'm buying a glare guard for my computer screen. This will help diffuse the spots I see, that are generated by the floor lamp I am using to improperly illuminate the entire room. For about $50 dollars, I will see bright and crisp figures on the screen, against a dark blue background that offers exactly the right amount of contrast. Of course, following this, I will invest in overhead lighting for my unusually high, slanted ceiling, and also clear off enough space from my too-small desk for a desk lamp. It's important to have different levels of ambiant light, so your eyes don't have to strain. That will help immensely. In order to fit the lamp, and the new gel mouse pad that will save my sore wrists, I will need a bigger desk. That will also be exciting to buy. The variations are tremendous. I could buy a large writing table, and use the whole one-level surface, or I can chose a two-level computer desk, to keep everything in the right proportion. Both of these will hold my notes, beverages and mouse pad gracefully and usefully.

Some other easy basics are more filing cabinets that will erode the stack on the floor, an in box to hold my to-do's, and a storage box for my cd roms and zip disks. The list really is endless. But I have to start somewhere.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Transfers:

Broad Cove, a 94-acre estate in Aqueboque, just sold for $15 million last month, and is already listed again for $30 million. The Peconic Bay waterfront property near Indian Island Park was originally earmarked for environmental preservation that never flew. A 500-unit condominium project was once proposed for the same property. No definite plans for the property's future have been made public.

In Jamesport, an old landmark home and one time spooky restaurant, The Jamesport Manor Inn on Manor Lane, was just purchased by Mathew Kar, owner of The Country Inn in the same town. The 1850 gothic revival style structure that has been sitting neglected and in disrepair since 1999 was recently bought for $800,000. The new owner plans to renovate and restore the restaurant. He also plans to build a barn-style catering facility on the property that will accommodate as many as 200.

On the Market:

Sagaponack Home of Sandy Gallin is now for sale for $21 million. The pond-front home, on 14 acres, is known for its natural pool that all but blends into the pond. It was bought by Gallin just a few years ago for $5,750,000 and will turn a hefty profit.

On Ram's Head Island, Shelter Island, the Ashcroft Estate is a 2-acre waterfront that faces Coecles Harbor. The main house is 5000 sq ft, has 6 bedrooms, 6 1\2 baths and has a separate guest cottage. There is a gym, a pool and a 125' private dock. Allan M Schneider in North Haven has listed the property for $9,500,000.

Also on Shelter Island is the historic Cackle Hill Estate on West Neck Bay. The home, built at the turn of the century, is a one-of-a-kind farmhouse, barn and dock on 25 acres. It has 6 bedrooms and 6 baths and is listed for $6,950,000.

The stately Maycroft Mansion is still holding strong at $25 million. A inter-governmental partnership is discussing plans for the proposed purchase. It is the hope of local officials that New York State environmental protection funds will provide enough money to save the 43-acre estate from development. They base their proposition on its proximity to precious wetlands and its historical value.

Changes:

9.5 acres in Sag Harbor this week was dedicated as Generations Park. The project, a brain child of business partners and dually concerned East Enders Steve Williams and Ross Jacobs, has finally come to fruition. Their interest in the parcel began in 2002.

In Jamesport this week, the town flat out said no to a 160-unit condominium complex and shopping center, refusing to even consider the application. The proposed project, known as Lakeview at Jamesport, hoped to build a senior residence as well as a 71,000 sq ft shopping center on the 34 acres that corner Main Road and Manor Lane.

The numbers:

The value of Montauk: The median price for a home in Montauk in the year 2000 has more than doubled in today's "hot" market. A home that sold for approximately $300,000 in 2000 now would be valued at about $750,000. Most listings there are up over a million and waterfront is not easy to come by, making prices stand firm.

Organic (continued from page 102)

planting. I learned how to build bamboo tripods for stabilizing my tomatoes when they grow tall. And then I set up my sprinkler, which I refuse to use a timer for so that my internal clock will synch up with my garden's, and sprayed with Kelp Plus, Earth's Fortune (vitamins and minerals to help my plants be strong), and Microtrol. I will spray the Kelp Plus once a week.

Two days later, "I am done with my garden," I said.

"No, you just got started," said the Organic Coach.

My first organic garden sits 100 yards from my window and it is in the back of my mind and the front of it. I am growing edamame for my little cousin. Cucumber and lettuce for my aunt, red peppers for my uncle and later I will plant some spaghetti squash for my friend Lori. While this garden is an incredibly personal experience, it is also the perfect opportunity to share the gifts of my new organic life with friends and family. It converts my organic talk to organic walk.

Police Blotter

Sneak A Peek Perv Eyes More Than What He Bargained For. A woman getting a head start on her summer tan got quite the start when she caught a male employee at the Beach Body Tan and Treats in Montauk ogling her au natural. According to police reports, the man was confronted by the hot bed honey in the tanning salon's parking lot.

* * *

Don't Have A Conniption! I'm Leaving. This was the alleged reply a prowler gave when asked what he was doing in an East Hampton Point cottage in Springs. Turns out his midnight stalk woke the inhabitants, who were more than just a little disturbed.

* * *

You're Fired! A parking valet attendant at the Star Room in Wainscott accidentally gave the keys to a Nissan Exterra to the wrong party. According to Southampton police reports, when the rightful owner showed up to claim her vehicle, it was nowhere to be found. It appears it was love at first sight as the trio who made off with the SUV were last seen burning rubber westbound.

Is It Summer Yet? Looks Like It... Amid blooms at Buckley's Flower Shop in East Hampton a ruckus broke out between two petal patrons resulting in dents on the roof and driver's side for one and a run over foot for the other. Allegedly tempers flared when the driver of a gray Mercedes repeatedly ignored pleas to slow down in the parking lot. When the driver was confronted he plowed over the foot of the complainant. To retaliate, the complainant pelted the driver's side and hood leaving several dents.

Finder's Keepers? An East Hampton resident was surprised to find an unidentified car parked in her driveway and the driver riffling through her mail tossing it into surrounding bushes. When confronted he sped off only to be arrested later at his home the same day. Identified in a line up, he was charged with attempted petit larceny and arrested for trespassing.

Oh-Oh Spaghetti O's. A would-be "shopper" at the Montauk IGA was caught pilfering four cans of Spaghettio's. Nabbed by the manager as he tried to leave the grocery store with out paying, the man was placed under arrest by police.

* * *

Thank Heaven For 7-11? A Brooklyn youth was arrested after being found with quantities of cocaine and marijuana in her pocket at the scene of a fight, which erupted in the parking lot at 7-11 on North Sea Road in Southampton. Same locale...but different day, two Queen's men, one from Flushing the other from Bayside, were arrested for possession of cocaine and ecstasy. Also at 7-11, though this time in Sag Harbor, two Bridgehamptonites were slugging it out in the parking lot. According to Village Police, the pugilists were given several opportunities to leave the scene. Instead the duo engaged in fisticuffs with the officers netting charges of disorderly conduct, obstructing governmental administration and resisting arrest.

Mailbox Fetishist Makes Move On Two. Within in five minutes of each other, two Sag Harbor village residents reported their mailboxes missing. Looks like someone with a hankering for post boxes is on the loose.

Stainless Steal. A Baiting Hollow homeowner reported an early morning appliance heist. Apparently robbed were a stainless steel dishwasher and refrigerator.

SAND SCOOP
Dear Dan,

I read your article on dogs on the beach in you're my 28, 2004 issue and find it inaccurate...not like you. Beaches in the Town of East Hampton, Village of East Hampton, and Montauk have different rules and are governed with Trustee approval...except Montauk beaches which are governed by the town without the trustees...the people assigned to maintain the beaches for the people (not animals) by the Dongan Patent decreed by the King of England in 1650+/-.

For the record, the law passed by the town of East Hampton on August 1, 2003 changed the no dogs rule from 300 feet from any paved road opening on the ocean. A curious note is that the Trustees in Southampton told me they don't concern themselves with dogs...whereas the Trustees in East Hampton do.

You indicate a leash-your-dog zone...where is there a leash law and the dogs on the beach law say the dogs must me manually restrained while traversing the beach from a paved road to a distance of 500 feet where they can frolic. And the "one hearing" (Trustee meeting) you quote an attorney (Lona Rubenstein is not an attorney bur our advocate) and we re one hundred and thirty (130) individual homeowners on the Napeague Strip not condo owners. Our two block beach between Marlin and Dolphin Drive is a bathing beach and plagued by playful dogs and vicious owners where dogs poop and owners kick the offending deposit under the sand so unlucky bathers' feet could locate the buried treasure.

Our homeowners association EEDRA (East End Dunes Resident Association) collecst dues to have the beach cleaned and we provide pooper scooper bag stations throughout the area...If you really want the scoop on our beach, come to our homeowners meeting on Saturday, June 12 at 10 a.m. at the corner of Marlin Drive and Montauk Highway. Bagels and coffee gratis.

LIGHT BULB GOES OFF
Dear Dan,

Thank you for calling attention to the electricity shortage problems on theEast End. (Play With Electricity On An Offshore Island And Get A Shock) I, however, totally disagree with your summation that there are only two ways to get electricity to the Hamptons - foreign oil and cross-Sound cables. I believe you've left out one of the most viable energy sources we have and the reason many people come to the East End.

The Sun! Solar energy installations grew at a worldwide rate of 34 percent last year, according to industry consultants. Through the Long Island Power Authority's Solar Pioneer Program, solar contractors like Brooklyn-based Solar Energy Systems, Inc. (www.solaresystems.com) can install a grid-tied system that will send power back to LIPA (through a system called net-metering) when your solar system is making more power than it is using. This includes all winter when most Hamptons houses sit idle, but the sun continues to shine.

LIPA's direct incentives of $4.50 per watt and New York State solar tax credits can offset the cost of a system by more than 50 percent. Savings on your annual energy bills can add up to hundreds of dollars. East End residents must start to take responsibility for their huge rate of electric consumption and should look to alternative energy as a respectful choice to ensure a brighter future for our precious world.

STOP SCREAMING
Dear Dan,

Just wanted to share a situation that I experienced over the Memorial Day weekend. I live in Manorville.

I was on the drive through line of McDonalds on CR. 111. Due to a poorly designed parking lot, I did seem to be blocking traffic. I looked to my left and a Land Rover was flying around the corner. The driver stopped short when he saw my car. He then proceeded to lie on the horn. I tried to ignore him, knowing that it would only be a few seconds until I was out of his way. After awhile I looked over and he was screaming and calling me every name in the book. I just kind of laughed and said to him that I was not moving until the cars in front of me did. This did not go over well, as he continued to beep and curse at me. Finally, the cars in front of me moved and I got out of his way. He flew passed me, pulled into a spot and went inside. As I was leaving I noticed that the frame around his license was from a dealership in the city.

The point is, I know that the people from the city come out here for vacations and that they are in a rush when they fly through Manorville. They need to keep in mind that there are people who live here all year long. We are just going through our every day routine when they rush in and out of our towns. Have a little consideration and patience.

Lori Manorville

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpecting motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble an ellipitical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.

PETS AND PET SERVICES

My name is Van. I am a 2 year old, male Malinois Shepherd. I was imported from Belgium. My brother works with Special Forces operations in Iraq. I am smart, quick and handsome. My current owner is a very senior executive with the CIA. As you might imagine, he is very busy now and does not have a lot of time to spend with me. So, I am looking for a new home. I am housebroken and have been around children. I really need a new owner who can spend time with me. I prefer a lot of room to run. If you think I am the dog for you, please call Richie at (631) 537-0664.
